

Cal. energy panel OKs Sohio L.B. terminal

From Our State Bureau
SACRAMENTO — The State Energy Commission voted tentatively Friday to adopt its staff recommendation that California approve construction of Sohio's $45-million ship terminal for Alaskan oil in Long Beach.

The vote recommending construction of Phase 1 of the terminal will be included in a report to Gov. Brown and the Legislature next week.

However, the commission also voted to reconsider its approval next week.

The commission did not reveal how its five members voted or why they voted for reconsideration, although the reconsideration move indicates the vote was not unanimous.

At the same time, the staff report recommended that the most efficient method of distributing Alaskan oil to the Midwest and East would be through a trans-Canadian pipeline linking tanker terminals in British Columbia to refineries in Illinois.

Phase 1 of the Sohio project would include a terminal at the foot of Pier J large enough to accommodate three tankers bringing up to 700,000 barrels per day of Alaskan crude oil for distribution to refineries in the Long Beach area and by pipeline to Texas.

The report pointed out that neither the trans-Canadian nor the Sohio pipelines could, by themselves, entirely handle Alaska's North Slope output, estimated to be up to 2 million barrels per day by 1981.

Construction of both the Sohio project, over which the state has jurisdiction, and a trans-Canadian pipeline could eliminate the need for Phase 2 of Sohio's plan, which calls for an expanded terminal and pipelines, the report said.

Under the trans-Canadian proposal, which has also been given a high priority by the Federal Energy Administration, an existing Canadian pipeline would have to be enlarged from 30 to 36 inches in diameter to handle North Slope output.

Until the Canadian pipeline is enlarged, the commission's staff report recommends that the U.S.

exchange crude oil with Canada and Japan.

The report says the exchange with Canada would require the U.S. to purchase domestic or foreign oil and have it delivered to Canadian refineries in Toronto and Montreal. Canadian refineries in turn would purchase oil from their western province of Alberta and deliver it to Midwestern refineries.

Under the staff's proposed exchange agreement with Japan, that nation would purchase oil in the Middle East and deliver it to Atlantic states' refineries. Japan would then receive a barrel-for-barrel quantity of Alaskan oil.

As for Sohio, the report suggests that "the state should agree only to 'Phase 1' of the Sohio-Long Beach project . . . (which) would leave enough extra capacity in existing pipelines to handle potential new deliveries of natural gas."

Sohio and gas industry executives have said several east-to-west gas pipelines could be abandoned to allow west-to-east oil deliveries because of diminishing gas reserves

Carter signals intent to open ties with Viets

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — President Carter, in a flurry of activity before returning to Georgia for the first time as President, signaled his intention Friday to establish normal diplomatic relations with the Socialist Republic of Vietnam by announcing plans to send a U.S. delegation there.

The delegation will discuss missing military personnel and a wide range of other bilateral issues.

He offered no timetable and named no emissaries, but made it clear that the agenda he seeks would include questions other than accounting by Vietnam for 2,500 Americans still listed as missing or presumed dead.

THERE WAS NO immediate indication from the Vietnamese government whether such a mission would be acceptable, but knowledgeable sources at the White House and at the State Department suggested that the proposal has already found preliminary favor in Hanoi.

Carter's plans were disclosed Friday in an aide's report on the

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The government on Friday reported economic indicators that provide a somewhat more reassuring view of the nation's prospects despite the recent spell of unusually frigid weather.

Although the blizzards depressed retail sales in January below December levels, the Commerce Department recorded a pickup in consumer buying in the first week of February, even with the continued cold.

Particularly strong that week were auto and accessory sales, which showed a gain of 14 1/2 per cent over the preceding week and 26 per cent over the same week a year ago.

"This shows consumers are willing to spend, if they get the money to do so," said one government economist.

Labor Department statistics showed wholesale prices rising by an annual rate of 6 per cent in January, or by roughly the same moderate rate as in the previous half year.

Because of reporting lags, the interpretations were mixed. The increase of 0.5 per cent in January, compared with 0.6 per cent in each of the preceding two months, but it mainly reflected prices in effect on Jan. 11, or well before the economy was struck by the full impact of one of the coldest winters of the century.

Processed foods and feeds and fuel items actually declined, but Julius Shiskin, commissioner of labor statistics, said the energy prices, because of quirks in reporting procedures, were those in effect in December. Fuel was tagged off 4.6 per cent and the processed foods off 0.2 per cent.

John Kendrick, the Commerce Department's chief economist, found some encouragement from the wholesale price figures, which normally affect retail levels in a few months' time, as well as from recent Agriculture Department projections that the Florida citrus crop will be larger than last year, despite frost damage.

House dispute stalls assassinations probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House assassination committee's chairman has blocked the committee chief counsel's investigators from FBI files, sources say, and the dispute between chairman and counsel left uncertain the future of the probe of the assassinations of President Kennedy and Martin Luther King.

Committee aides had been visiting FBI headquarters daily for the past several weeks to examine the files but were turned away Friday morning, the sources said.

Chairman Henry Gonzalez, D-Tex., announced Thursday that chief counsel Richard Sprague was fired and called him a "prima donna." However, the committee's other 11 members said Sprague was not fired.

Gonzalez had also met Thursday with Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell and, according to congressional and Justice Department sources,

Patty denied again in request for new trial

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's request for a new trial on bank robbery charges was turned down again Friday by U.S. District Court Judge William Orrick.

The judge said he rejected the move for reconsideration of his Nov. 19 denial of a motion for a new trial because the request hadn't been made within the prescribed time limit.

Orrick added that had he considered the matter on its merits, he also would have denied the motion.

Miss Hearst's appeal from her conviction and sentence is now before the 9th U.S. Court of Appeals.

Miss Hearst, 22, was convicted by a jury last March and sentenced Sept. 24 to a seven-year term. She presently is free on $1.25 million bail pending resolution of her appeal.

The defense had 10 days — or until Nov. 30 — after the judge's first denial to ask for a reconsideration. The law also provides for requesting a 30-day discretionary period before the filing deadline, but this was not sought.

The move for reconsideration was not filed until Jan. 7. Orrick denied it as "having been untimely filed."

The latest request had involved the claim that the government withheld evidence that might have been favorable to Miss Hearst during the trial and knowingly used "false and misleading evidence."

Orrick said that because of the "abundance of independent convicting evidence adduced at trial," even impeachment of certain testimony about a Los Angeles sporting goods store incident in which Miss Hearst was involved would not have changed the result.

Flooding threatens snow-ravaged East

Associated Press

A sudden thaw — with temperatures jumping 40 and 50 degrees in some places — coupled with rain threatened to set the East awash in melted snow and ice this weekend.

A flash flood watch was posted for western New York state, where Mayor Stanley Makowski of blizzard-shocked Buffalo cautioned, "There's a real potential for another disaster: flooding. There must be some massive preparations now."

Temperatures Friday were in the 40s and 50s through most of the East, in contrast to record-setting below zero lows at the beginning of the month.

Ice still chokes a 63-mile stretch of the Mississippi above Cairo, Ill., where commercial river traffic has been stalled for nearly a month. Sunken barges are hampering tugs trying to punch through ice as thick as nine feet in some spots.

"The combined flow of the big five rivers — Mississippi, St. Lawrence, Columbia, Ohio and Missouri — averaged 33 per cent below normal in January," said the U.S. Geological Survey in Washington.

The outlook for the East is for plenty of water, however, with "frozen water reserves running several times above normal.... Whether these frozen water resources become a flood problem ... depends on future weather conditions," said survey officials.

State officials from Ohio, West Virginia, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Kentucky met Friday in Cincinnati to plan for possible flooding along the Ohio River.

U.S., Russ race to harness killer laser

By DREW MIDDLETON
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — The "death ray" is still in the realm of science fiction, but lasers powerful enough to inflict significant damage are moving toward the arsenals of the Soviet Union and the United States.

Dr. Kumar Patel, inventor of the high-energy carbon-oxygen laser, said recently that, with current technology, his laser had the potential size, efficiency and power to be packaged in a transport aircraft from which it could knock other aircraft from the sky "at long distances."

This statement focused attention on the Defense Department's laser-weapons development group at Kirtland Air Force Base in Albuquerque, N.M. Known by the code name Eighth Card, the base is run by the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA).

Dr. George Heilmeyer, DARPA's director, denies the existence of laser "superweapons" in any of the services. Pentagon sources laugh at reports of "death rays" that can vaporize ships over the horizon.

Experiments in industrial laboratories, however, already have demonstrated lasers potent enough to inflict significant damage to planes, missiles or satellites.

Capt. G.R. Villar, a former director of British naval intelligence, reported that in 1975 it became known that the Soviets had developed a high-powered laser as an antiballistic missile weapon.

Discussing defense against missiles, Villar said that "the only totally new line is a laser damage weapon — the single

The consensus in the Pentagon is that the United States today leads the Russians in the pointing and tracking technology for high-energy laser weapons, but continues to lag in the technology of lasers themselves.

The Defense Department remains silent on details of laser development despite increasing discussion about the possibility that high-energy lasers may be maturing into strategic weapons.

In the Army there have been persistent rumors about a laser gun designed to blind enemy artillerymen. There has been no official comment on the rumors.

Two Navy groups, the Naval Surface Weapons Center and the High Energy Laser Project Office of the Naval Sea Systems Command, in 1976 disclosed the award of a $7.7-million contract to Hughes Aircraft for development of a high energy laser.

Foreign intelligence sources believe the Navy is working on a laser for delivery in the late 1980s to be used against air attacks.

The Army already is experimenting with a rifle-type laser for use with tanks and artillery and other lasers for the guidance of surface-to-air and surface-to-surface missiles. The Air Force is developing laser ranging devices for guiding bombs and missiles.

Despite the comparative slowness of development, U.S. scientists see a big future for lasers in rocket-propulsion systems. They also have noted the high-energy laser's ability to transmit energy over great distances at the speed of light and its ability to hit a target much more quickly than a missile.

Gunman arraigned; immunity grant status argued

Combined News Services
Anthony G. Kiritis, who considered himself a free man after releasing the hostage he held during a 63-hour vendetta, was arraigned in Indianapolis Friday on a list of charges, including kidnapping. The stocky, 44-year-old Kiritis was ordered held under $850,000 bond, despite the grant of immunity read to him during the siege. Some authorities said Friday they never intended to let him go free. "We had to placate him," Indianapolis Mayor William H. Hudnut said. "Everybody thought he had the dynamite. I was scared to death that one or both of them were going to lose their lives."

During the three-day standoff, Kiritis said he had rigged dynamite in the apartment where he was holding Richard O. Hall, but none was found after his surrender. The question remained whether the grant of immunity could be withdrawn — or whether it was even legal to start with. "There was never any intention on the part of the prosecutor to honor those terms," deputy county prosecutor George Martz said at an afternoon news conference attended by Kiritis' victim, Richard O. Hall. Hall, an executive of the mortgage company which was foreclosing on Kiritis' $130,000 land mortgage, said he was handcuffed throughout the ordeal and a sawed-off shotgun was wired to his neck most of the last two days. Kiritis faces charges of kidnapping, inflicting injury in commission of a felony, armed robbery, obtaining a signature by threat, commission of a felony while armed, committing a crime of violence while armed and disorderly conduct. Authorities maintained that Kiritis had broken terms of the immunity by not releasing Hall before leaving the apartment. Martz, who handled most of the negotiations, said he was "not really concerned" whether authorities had broken their promise of immunity. "We'll let the courts deal with that," he said. A question raised frequently during the siege was the legality in the first place of any grant of immunity given under pressure. The Indianapolis Star quoted an unidentified spokesman for the prosecutor's office Friday as saying the immunity was not binding because it was given under duress. "It is no more legal that a contract obtained by holding a gun to someone's head," the paper reported.

'Simple girl' becomes a Cinderella

It began as a promotion for a movie studio, but the nationwide search for Cinderella ended Friday as a fairy tale came true for a 17-year-old high school coed from Barstow. Brenda Howard, who, like Cinderella, was orphaned in childhood and has lived with relatives ever since, received her bouquets and the musical tribute staged by Universal Studios in Hollywood with characteristic grace. "I'm just a girl with simple dreams," Miss Howard wrote in the 25-word statement that accompanied her contest application. "One dream is to be someone special. Cinderella is special. And this would be my own fairy tale." The Kennedy High School coed, a recent transfer from Ft. Worth, Tex., was selected by Universal's panel of five judges after the nationally advertised contest drew more than 2,000 entrants from around the nation, including one 19-year-old boy and a girl who sent in a nude photograph of herself. "Are you the real Cinderella?" the ads asked. Universal publicity director Shirley Carroll said the studio was unaware until after the selection that the girl was an orphan whose life in many ways did parallel that of Cinderella. She said her prize would be a vacation at Yosemite National Park and a small part in an upcoming feature film, "High School." The ads also promised the winning girl would be "transformed" by Hollywood costume Edith Head and the Universal makeup department. "She was transformed, but not much, since she was already fantastic," Miss Carroll said. "I'm sure if you saw her picture you would say: 'Ah, Cinderella.'" The studio has no plans to develop the girl into a star, Miss Carroll said. "She wants to be a park ranger," the publicist added, "and we encourage her in that." The promotion was conceived to coincide with Valentine's Day and to herald the opening of Universal's "The Slipper and the Rose," a Cinderella remake starring Richard Chamberlain and a young English actress, Gemma Craven. The applicants were screened and 12 finalists interviewed Sunday by the five judges, including "The Slipper and the Rose" producers, Richard and Robert Sherman, producer-director Gerald Gordon, Hollywood fashion designer Mr. Blackwell and Milt Larsen, a television writer and operator of the Magic Castle, a Hollywood magic club.

She was a sore loser

A woman whipped out a pistol Friday and fatally wounded her courtroom adversary, once a friend, just moments after losing a civil suit in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., over a house. George Kissak, 62, was hit in the upper abdomen by a single bullet. He was rushed from the Broward County Courthouse to a local hospital but died 75 minutes later, said police spokesman Paul Arena. The woman, Elizabeth Duncan, 58, was disarmed by bailiff George Tretakis immediately after the 5:50 p.m. shooting. "I told him I'd kill him," Arena said Miss Duncan screamed while being led from the courthouse by police. She was later booked without bond on a charge of murder, Arena said. Tretakis said he was leading the jury out of the courtroom after the verdict when he heard a blast. He said he whirled around, rushed the the woman, grabbed the gun and slapped his handcuffs on her. David Sapp, one of victim's attorneys, said the shooting came on the heels of the verdict. "The woman said something like, 'You mean I don't get any money?' And her attorney said no. She just walked right up and shot him (Kissak). The verdict was just rendered and she didn't like it," Sapp said. The civil case involved a five-year-old dispute over the ownership of a house in Imperial Point, a Fort Lauderdale suburb.

Sentenced

A federal judge in Philadelphia sentenced antiwar activist Susan Saxe to 10 years in prison on Friday for the 1970 robbery of a savings and loan company here and a break-in at a National Guard armory in Massachusetts. U.S. District Court Judge Alfred Duongo said the sentencing would be served concurrently with a 12-14 year term Ms. Saxe received for her part in the robbery of a Boston bank, in which a policeman was killed. Ms. Saxe, 27, pleaded guilty to the Philadelphia robbery and the armed break-in. The government agreed to dismiss further prosecution.

Knievel sues

Motorcycle daredevil Evel Knievel said Friday he has sued the Chicago Sun-Times for $200 million for publishing remarks suggesting he is anti-Semitic. The newspaper had no immediate comment on the suit. Knievel's attorney also was unavailable. A spokesman for Knievel said the newspaper published stories Jan. 27 and Jan. 28 saying "among other things that Mr. Knievel was sick and tired of dealing with Jews." Knievel said the statements were malicious and untrue. The spokesman said the suit was filed Friday in U.S. District Court.

Mr. Hustler

Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt invited reporters into jail in Cincinnati Friday and vowed he would not compromise. Flynt spent his day talking to groups of reporters who had been lured by the promise of a news conference with the 34-year-old publisher, who has been convicted on charges of obscenity and engaging in organized crime. "When I started Hustler, I wanted to deal with sex the way I knew it . . . four-letter words and all," Flynt said. "The price I have paid is my freedom. If I am guilty of anything, it is of parodying the American way of life."

MADRID — Police rescued two high officials unharmed Friday from their leftist kidnappers and jailed the men who masterminded the abductions. Solving the kidnappings eased the most serious challenge to Spanish government since the death of Gen. Francisco Franco in November, 1975. Police found and freed Lt. Gen. Emilio Villaescusa, Spain's chief military judge, from a Madrid apartment, and a few minutes later went into another apartment on the opposite side of the capital and released royal adviser Antonio Maria de Oriol. Villaescusa was kidnapped 18 days ago, Oriol two months ago. More than two dozen suspects including four ringleaders of the radical left organization called GRAPO were under arrest in the case. Police met little resistance when they burst into the two apartments holding the victims.

E. German callup

BERLIN — Communist East Germany is calling up military reservists, apparently because of unrest among its own and neighboring populations. An Allied spokesman in West Berlin said, "The reports that this callup is taking place apparently are reliable. But we have no information why they are taking place . . . on Soviet insistence, to impress the Polish or Czechoslovakian or East German populations, or what."

S. Viets relocated

HONG KONG — Some former South Vietnamese military officers and civil servants still being held prisoner by the Communists are being transferred to so-called re-education camps near Hanoi, reports from Vietnam indicate. Analysts here say the information is too fragmentary to judge how many men have been sent.

Anti-apartheid step

PRETORIA, South Africa — The Roman Catholic Church announced Friday it intends to appoint black priests to white parishes as part of major church reforms in racially divided South Africa. Later Friday, two senior police officers visited the Roman Catholic secretariat in Pretoria requesting evidence to back up church allegations of police brutality against blacks, a church spokesman reported. On Thursday, the church sharply criticized alleged police brutality during last year's riots.

Gunman holds eight

CINCINNATI — A man with a shotgun and a woman accomplice took eight hostages in a home for unwed mothers Friday night and threatened to kill them unless the gunman received information about a baby he said was born there 20 years ago. One witness said she heard the man say he was the father of the baby and he wanted it back.

Indian land ruling

TUCSON, Ariz. — A federal judge has ordered the Navajo and Hopi tribes to end a century-old dispute by dividing evenly 1.8 million acres of land in northeast Arizona. About 3,500 Navajos living in areas that will go to the Hopi tribe must be relocated. The area to be divided is a rectangle about 58 miles wide by 70 miles long. In the lower center is the Hopi reservation of 650,000 acres. The Navajo reservation surrounds the rectangle. Navajos and their livestock slowly migrated onto the fringes of the Hopi reservation over the last 100 years.

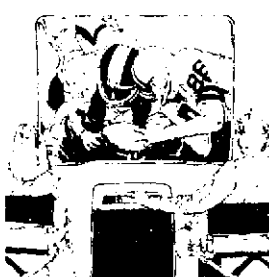

Death investigation

DALLAS — Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell said Friday that the Justice Department will seek prosecution of former Castroville, Tex., Marshal Frank Hayes for the death of a Mexican-American prisoner. Hayes was convicted of aggravated assault in connection with the Sept. 14, 1975, death of Richard Morales, 29, whom he had arrested hours earlier as a robbery suspect. Jurors said later that they thought they had convicted Hayes of murder by aggravated assault. Hayes admitted in court that he had shot Morales, but insisted that the shooting was accidental.

Gunman arraigned; immunity grant status argued

Combined News Services

Anthony G. Kirtsis, who considered himself a free man after releasing the hostage he held during a 63-hour vendetta, was arraigned in Indianapolis Friday on a list of charges, including kidnapping.

The stocky, 44-year-old Kirtsis was ordered held under $850,000 bond, despite the grant of immunity read to him during the siege. Some authorities said Friday they never intended to let him go free.

"We had to placate him," Indianapolis Mayor William H. Hudnut said. "Everybody thought he had the dynamite. I was scared to death that one or both of them were going to lose their lives."

During the three-day standoff, Kirtsis said he had rigged dynamite in the apartment where he was holding Richard O. Hall, but none was found after his surrender.

The question remained whether the grant of immunity could be withdrawn — or whether it was even legal to start with.

"There was never any intention on the part of the prosecutor to honor those terms," deputy county prosecutor George Martz said at an afternoon news conference attended by Kirtsis' victim, Richard O. Hall.

Hall, an executive of the mortgage company which was foreclosing on Kirtsis' $130,000 land mortgage, said he was handcuffed throughout the ordeal and a sawed-off shotgun was wired to his neck most of the last two days.

Kirtsis faces charges of kidnapping, inflicting injury in commission of a felony, armed robbery, obtaining a signature by threat, commission of a felony while armed, committing a crime of violence while armed and disorderly conduct.

Authorities maintained that Kirtsis had broken terms of the immunity by not releasing Hall before leaving the apartment.

Martz, who handled most of the negotiations, said he was "not really concerned" whether authorities had broken their promise of immunity. "We'll let the court deal with that," he said.

A question raised frequently during the siege was the legality in the first place of any grant of immunity given under pressure.

The Indianapolis Star quoted an unidentified spokesman for the prosecutor's office Friday as saying the immunity was not binding because it was given under duress.

"It is no more legal that a contract obtained by holding a gun to someone's head," the paper reported.

'Simple girl' becomes a Cinderella

It began as a promotion for a movie studio, but the nationwide search for Cinderella ended Friday as a fairy tale come true for a 17-year-old high school coed from Barstow.

Brenda Howard, who, like Cinderella, was orphaned in childhood and has lived with relatives ever since, received her bouquets and the musical tribute staged by Universal Studios in Hollywood with characteristic grace.

"I'm just a girl with simple dreams," Miss Howard wrote in the 25-word statement that accompanied her contest application. "One dream is to be someone special. Cinderella is special. And this would be my own fairy tale."

The Kennedy High School coed, a recent transfer from Ft. Worth, Tex., was selected by Universal's panel of five judges after the nationally advertised contest drew more than 2,000 entrants from around the nation, including one 19-year-old boy and a girl who sent in a nude photograph of herself.

"Are you the real Cinderella?" the ads asked. Universal publicity director Shirley Carroll said the studio was unaware until after the selection that the girl was an orphan whose life in many ways did parallel that of Cinderella.

She said her prize would be a vacation at Yosemite National Park and a small part in an upcoming feature film, "High School."

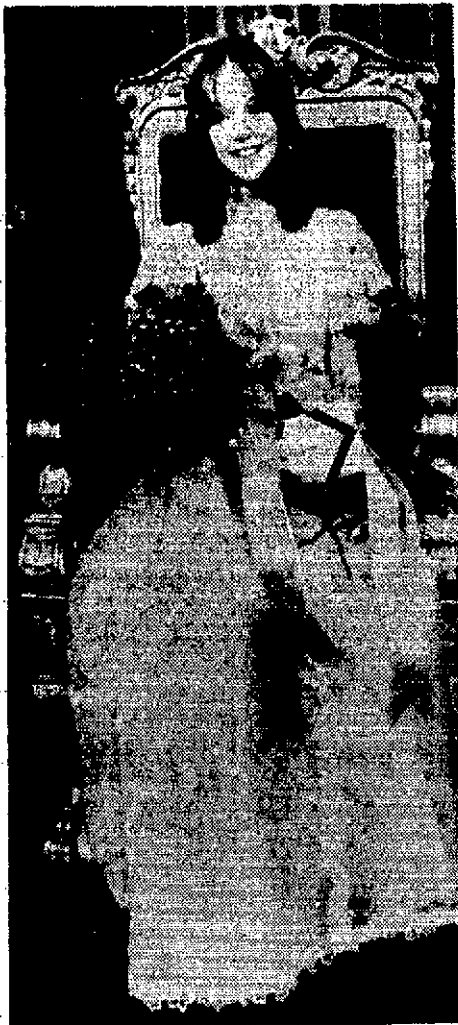

The ads also promised the winning girl would be "transformed" by Hollywood costumer Edith Head and the Universal makeup department.

"She was transformed, but not much, since she was already fantastic," Miss Carroll said. "I'm sure if you saw her picture you would say: 'Ah, Cinderella.'"

The studio has no plans to develop the girl into a star, Miss Carroll said. "She wants to be a park ranger," the publicist added, "and we encourage her in that."

The promotion was conceived to coincide with Valentine's Day and to herald the opening of Universal's "The Slipper and the Rose," a Cinderella remake starring Richard Chamberlain and a young English actress, Gemma Craven.

The applicants were screened and 12 finalists interviewed Sunday by the five judges, including "The Slipper and the Rose" producers, Richard and Robert Sherman, producer-director Gerald Gordon, Hollywood fashion designer Mr. Blackwell and Milt Larsen, a television writer and operator of the Magic Castle, a Hollywood magic club.

BRENDA HOWARD answered an advertisement, and the orphan girl from Barstow became a real-life Cinderella.

She was a sore loser

A woman whipped out a pistol Friday and fatally wounded her courtroom adversary, once a friend, just moments after losing a civil suit in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., over a house.

George Kissak, 62, was hit in the upper abdomen by a single bullet. He was rushed from the Broward County Courthouse to a local hospital but died 75 minutes later, said police spokesman Paul Arena.

The woman, Elizabeth Duncan, 58, was disarmed by bailiff George Tretakis immediately after the 5:50 p.m. shooting.

"I told him I'd kill him," Arena said Miss Duncan screamed while being led from the courthouse by police. She was later booked without bond on a charge of murder, Arena said.

Tretakis said he was leading the jury out of the courtroom after the verdict when he heard a blast. He said he whirled around, rushed the the woman, grabbed the gun and slapped his handcuffs on her.

David Sapp, one of victim's attorneys, said the shooting came on the heels of the verdict.

"The woman said something like, 'You mean I don't get any money?' And her attorney said no. She just walked right up and shot him (Kissak). The verdict was just rendered and the lady didn't like it," Sapp said.

The civil case involved a five-year-old dispute over the ownership of a house in Imperial Point, a Fort Lauderdale suburb.

Sentenced

A federal judge in Philadelphia sentenced antiwar activist Susan Saxe to 10 years in prison on Friday for the 1970 robbery of a savings and loan company here and a break-in at a National Guard armory in Massachusetts.

U.S. District Court Judge Alfred Duongo said the sentencing would be served concurrently with a 12-14 year term Ms. Saxe received for her part in the robbery of a Boston bank, in which a policeman was killed. Ms. Saxe, 27, pleaded guilty to the Philadelphia robbery and the armed break-in. The government agreed to dismiss further prosecution.

Knievel sues

Motorcycle daredevil Evel Knievel said Friday he has sued the Chicago Sun-Times for $200 million for publishing remarks suggesting he is anti-Semitic. The newspaper had no immediate comment on the suit. Knievel's attorney also was unavailable.

A spokesman for Knievel said the newspaper published stories Jan. 27 and Jan. 28 saying "among other things that Mr. Knievel was sick and tired of dealing with Jews."

Knievel said the statements were malicious and untrue. The spokesman said the suit was filed Friday in U.S. District Court.

Mr. Hustler

Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt invited reporters into jail in Cincinnati Friday and vowed he would not compromise. Flynt spent his day talking to groups of reporters who had been lured by the promise of a news conference with the 34-year-old publisher, who has been convicted on charges of obscenity and engaging in organized crime.

"When I started Hustler, I wanted to deal with sex the way I knew it... four-letter words and all," Flynt said. "The price I have paid is my freedom. If I am guilty of anything, it is of parodying the American way of life."

Spanish hostages free

Combined News Services

MADRID — Police rescued two high officials unharmed Friday from their leftist kidnappers and jailed the men who masterminded the abductions.

Solving the kidnappings eased the most serious challenge to Spanish government since the death of Gen. Francisco Franco in November, 1975.

Police found and freed Lt. Gen. Emilio Villacueva, Spain's chief military judge, from a Madrid apartment, and a few minutes later swept into another apartment on the opposite side of the capital and released royal adviser Antonio Maria de Oriol. Villacueva was kidnapped 18 days ago, Oriol two months ago.

More than two dozen suspects including four ringleaders of the radical left organization called GRAPO were under arrest in the case. Police met little resistance when they burst into the two apartments holding the victims.

E. German callup

BERLIN — Communist East Germany is calling up military reservists, apparently because of unrest among its own and neighboring populations. An Allied spokesman in West Berlin said, "The reports that this callup is taking place... on Soviet insistence, to impress the Polish or Czechoslovakian or East German populations, or what."

S. Viets relocated

HONG KONG — Some former South Vietnamese military officers and civil servants still being held prisoner by the Communists are being transferred to so-called re-education camps near Hanoi, reports from Vietnam indicate. Analysts here say the information is too fragmentary to judge how many men have been sent.

Anti-apartheid step

PRETORIA, South Africa — The Roman Catholic Church announced Friday it intends to appoint black priests to white parishes as part of major church reforms in racially divided South Africa.

Late Friday, two senior police officers visited the Roman Catholic secretariat in Pretoria requesting evidence to back up church allegations of police brutality against blacks, a church spokesman reported. On Thursday, the church sharply criticized alleged police brutality during last year's riots.

Gunman holds eight

CINCINNATI — A man with a shotgun and a woman accomplice took eight hostages in a home for unwed mothers Friday night and threatened to kill them unless the gunman received information about a baby he said was born there 20 years ago. One witness said she heard the man say he was the father of the baby and he wanted it back.

Indian land ruling

TUCSON, Ariz. — A federal judge has ordered the Navajo and Hopi Indian tribes to end a century-old dispute by dividing evenly 1.8 million acres of land in northeast Arizona.

About 3,500 Navajos living in areas that will go to the Hopi tribe must be relocated. The area to be divided is a rectangle about 58 miles wide by 70 miles long. In the lower center is the Hopi reservation of 650,000 acres. The Navajo reservation surrounds the rectangle. Navajos and their livestock slowly migrated onto the fringes of the Hopi reservation over the last 100 years.

Record check

I'm incarcerated at the Federal Correctional Institution at Terminal Island and unless I can prove that I am an American citizen I will be deported to Canada upon my release. My father was born in Sibley, Iowa, March 1, 1897, and went to Canada when he was in his mid-twenties and married my mother, a Canadian citizen, under the laws of the United States. I am an American citizen even though I was born in Canada because my father was a citizen here. I've written to Osceola County, the county of his birth, trying to get his birth records only to be informed that records for that period are incomplete. I've also written to the county school board and the health department trying to get records but have never received a reply. Can you help me? R.E., Terminal Island.

You may be able to get help in proving your claim of your father's U.S. citizenship through federal census records for 1900. A form requesting a census search is being mailed to you by the Bureau of the Census office in Los Angeles. The fee for a census search is $8.50 and if your father is listed there will be additional charges for copies of the record which may substantiate his birth. We phoned the state Department of Health in Des Moines, Iowa, and learned there was no birth record for your father anywhere in the state in 1897. We also had the state census records for 1905 and 1915 checked but there was no mention of your father's family in Osceola County. Records for 1905, however, were incomplete because many of them were destroyed by a flood.

Steak claim

A salesman from Tully Steaks, 16602 S. Broadway, Gardena, came to my home Dec. 6 and sold me 10 New York cut steaks for $18.50. He said the meat was guaranteed and if I was not satisfied they would exchange the steaks. My husband and I attempted to eat two of those steaks for dinner that evening but they were so tough we had to throw them away. I called the company the next day and was assured a man would be out soon to exchange my steaks. No one has come out although I have phoned the company many times. Can you help me? T.R., Los Alamitos.

No. We worked on it for four weeks and are simply unable to resolve the problem. After numerous phone calls to both parties by Action Line, Tully Steaks did make two attempts to deliver steaks but they didn't phone you first and found no one at home. The second attempt was made after Action Line suggested that they phone you before going out. Subsequently, you informed us they made an appointment to deliver the steaks and you said that you waited at home all day but no one arrived. Tully Steaks claims that they tried several times to phone you but were unable to reach you.

Survival training

About a year ago I saw a program on TV about a company that trains people on vacation to survive in the wilderness. After about three days of training, the students were taken to an island off the coast of Washington where they were given a knife, a canteen and one candy bar to live on for three days. Can you help me find this company? L.B.G., Long Beach.

We checked with the search and rescue section of the State Department of Emergency Services in Olympia, Wash., the section which keeps track of many groups that send people into the wilderness, and they knew of none with a program such as you described. You may, however, be thinking of the Northwest Outward Bound School in Eugene, Ore. In the past, the school had a three-day solo outing in the wilderness—not on an island—as a "final exam" for its month-long physical fitness and survival training program. The solo outing was discontinued and students now go into the wilderness for four of five days in small groups with "reduced, but adequate food, sleeping bags and shelters," said Stan Beltis, spokesman for the school. The outing is meant to be more of a "contemplative thing" rather than a survival test, but when students had to find their own food, they rarely thought of anything else, he said. The school's program—with an emphasis on mountaineering and river running—is designed to "improve one's self confidence and promote better group relations." The school offers 8- to 24-day courses. Fees start at $300; partial scholarships are available. Brochures on the school, one of seven in the country, are being mailed to you. Others can write the school at 3200 Judkins Road, Eugene, Ore. 97403.

Bake-Off

Can Action Line find out when the Pillsbury Bake-Off contest will be held. I always miss it. T.H., Long Beach.

The next contest won't be held until February 1978, and entry blanks will be available in June in most grocery stores or from the Pillsbury Co., 840 Pillsbury Building, Minneapolis, Minn. 55402. The rules for the next contest have not been set yet, but generally, the recipes submitted must use a Pillsbury product and must not have been previously printed in a nationally distributed magazine. The company usually receives thousands of recipes and all are read. Many are tested by a group of home economists who whittle the list of contestants down to 100 finalists who are flown to the bake-off site, which will be in New Orleans in 1978. The finalists prepare their own recipes at the bake-off. The contest will have two divisions: one for recipes using Pillsbury's refrigerated products and one for recipes made with the company's dry goods. The prizes for the next contest have not been announced yet, but in the past, the first place winner in each division received $25,000.

Long Beach police officer Robert Schroeder pleaded not guilty Friday at his arraignment in Los Angeles Municipal Court on a murder charge stemming from the shooting death of a Compton restaurant owner.

Judge Michael Burke scheduled a preliminary hearing March 7 before Judge Antonio Chavez for Schroeder, 33.

A 13-year veteran of the department, Schroeder is charged in connection with the Jan. 14 shooting death of Anastosios Sparthorolos, 26, of South Gate.

Sparthorolos was shot when Schroeder attempted to arrest him behind the victim's restaurant, Tom's Good Old Boy's Sandwich

Shop, at 1521 S. Long Beach Blvd., Long Beach police investigators said.

Schroeder, who remains free on his own recognizance, has been reassigned to the patrol division to the communications division.

From Our L.A. Bureau
The federal government will no longer pay a share of welfare support for illegal aliens, and the change could cost Los Angeles County $200,000 a year, County Supervisor Pete Schabarum said Friday.

However, the county's acting welfare chief, Keith Conrie, said state officials told him Friday they are appealing the federal order.

The problem arose because of a conflict in federal and state welfare rules. The federal government says outright that illegal aliens are not eligible for federal welfare programs, but the state rules allow for an alien to be given aid until it is established he is in the United States illegally.

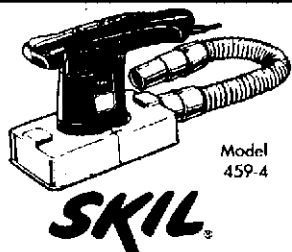

If a person seeking aid presents a "green card" or other proof of residence to welfare officials, his application is processed without any problem. But if the applicant has no papers but thinks he is legally in the United States, he can sign a form stating so and simply declare he is not under order of deportation.

In such cases, the county has been required to make aid payments but the case is referred to the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service for a check on the residential status.

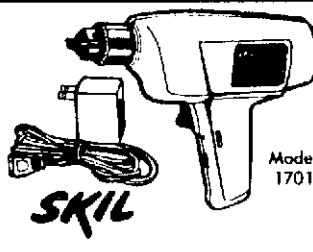

This check normally takes three months to complete, and the lag results in illegal aliens' being paid about $1.5 million a year in aid with the funding split between the federal government (50 per cent), the state (roughly 33 per cent) and the county (16 per cent).

A salesman from Tully Steaks, 16602 S. Broadway, Gardena, came to my home Dec. 6 and sold me 10 New York cut steaks for $18.50. He said the meat was guaranteed and if I was not satisfied they would exchange the steaks. My husband and I attempted to eat two of those steaks for dinner that evening but they were so tough we had to throw them away. I called the company the next day and was assured a man would be out soon to exchange my steaks. No one has come out although I have phoned the company many times. Can you help me? T.R., Los Alamitos.

No. We worked on it for four weeks and are simply unable to resolve the problem. After numerous phone calls to both parties by Action Line, Tully Steaks did make two attempts to deliver steaks but they didn't phone you first and found no one at home. The second attempt was made after Action Line suggested that they phone you before going out. Subsequently, you informed us they made an appointment to deliver the steaks and you said that you waited at home all day but no one arrived. Tully Steaks claims that they tried several times to phone you but were unable to reach you.

Survival training

About a year ago I saw a program on TV about a company that trains people on vacation to survive in the wilderness. After about three days of training, the students were taken to an island off the coast of Washington where they were given a knife, a canteen and one candy bar to live on for three days. Can you help me find this company? L.B.G., Long Beach.

We checked with the search and rescue section of the State Department of Emergency Services in Olympia, Wash., the section which keeps track of many groups that send people into the wilderness, and they knew of none with a program such as you described. You may, however, be thinking of the Northwest Outward Bound School in Eugene, Ore. In the past, the school had a three-day solo outing in the wilderness—not on an island—as a "final exam" for its month-long physical fitness and survival training program. The solo outing was discontinued and students now go into the wilderness for four of five days in small groups with "reduced, but adequate food; sleeping bags and shelters," said Stan Bettis, spokesman for the school. The outing is meant to be more of a "contemplative thing" rather than a survival test, but when students had to find their own food, they rarely thought of anything else, he said. The school's program—with an emphasis on mountaineering and river running—is designed to "improve one's self confidence and promote better group relations." The school offers 8- to 24-day courses. Fees start at $300; partial scholarships are available. Brochures on the school, one of seven in the country, are being mailed to you. Others can write the school at 3200 Judkins Road, Eugene, Ore. 97403.

Bake-Off

Can Action Line find out when the Pillsbury Bake-Off contest will be held. I always miss it. T.H., Long Beach.

The next contest won't be held until February 1978, and entry blanks will be available in June in most grocery stores or from the Pillsbury Co., 840 Pillsbury Building, Minneapolis, Minn. 55402. The rules for the next contest have not been set yet, but generally, the recipes submitted must use a Pillsbury product and must not have been previously printed in a nationally distributed magazine. The company usually receives thousands of recipes and all are read. Many are tested by a group of home economists who whittle the list of contestants down to 100 finalists who are flown to the bake-off site, which will be in New Orleans in 1978. The finalists prepare their own recipes at the bake-off. The contest will have two divisions: one for recipes using Pillsbury's refrigerated products and one for recipes made with the company's dry goods. The prizes for the next contest have not been announced yet, but in the past, the first place winner in each division received $25,000.

Long Beach police officer Robert Schroeder pleaded not guilty Friday at his arraignment in Los Angeles Municipal Court on a murder charge stemming from the shooting death of a Compton restaurant owner.

Judge Michael Burke scheduled a preliminary hearing March 7 before Judge Antonio Chavez for Schroeder, 33.

A 13-year veteran of the department, Schroeder is charged in connection with the Jan. 14 shooting death of Anastasios Sparthorolos, 26, of South Gate.

Sparthorolos was shot when Schroeder attempted to arrest him behind the victim's restaurant, Tom's Good Old Boy's Sandwich

Shop, at 1521 S. Long Beach Blvd., Long Beach police investigators said.

Schroeder, who remains free on his own recognizance, has been reassigned from the patrol division to the communications division.

Rule can cost county $200,000 a year

From Our L.A. Bureau
The federal government will no longer pay a share of welfare support for illegal aliens, and the change could cost Los Angeles County $200,000 a year, County Supervisor Pete Schabarum said Friday.

However, the county's acting welfare chief, Keith Conrie, said state officials told him Friday they are appealing the federal order.

The problem arose because of a conflict in federal and state welfare rules. The federal government says outright that illegal aliens are not eligible for federal welfare programs, but the state rules allow for an alien to be given aid until it is established he is in the United States illegally.

If a person seeking aid presents a "green card" or other proof of residence to welfare officials, his application is processed without any problem. But if the applicant has no papers but thinks he is legally in the United States, he can sign a form stating so and simply declare he is not under order of deportation.

In such cases, the county has been required to make aid payments but the case is referred to the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service for a check on the residential status.

This check normally takes three months to complete, and the lag results in illegal aliens being paid about $1.5 million a year in aid with the funding split between the federal government (50 per cent), the state (roughly 33 per cent) and the county (16 per cent).

If after the three-month check it is established that the recipient is in the country illegally, the federal government has up to now picked up its 50 per cent share of the cost on the basis of the payments being part of the normal error rate.

However, under the new state directive handed down this week the federal government will no longer assume its portions of these "mistakes."

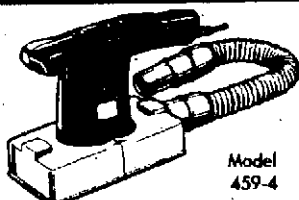

As a result, the county and the state will have to pick up the added 50 per cent in these instances.

Schabarum said this would double the county's cost of welfare to illegal aliens from about $200,000 to about $400,000.

If the state directive were to stand, it would also mean that the state's share of the program costs would double.

Brown hints water rationing if Californians don't cut back

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Brown said Friday he wants Californians to make maximum water cutbacks in their homes in order to minimize water shortages for agriculture and industry.

Brown repeated his reluctance to order statewide rationing, but he said it might come to that if voluntary cooperation doesn't produce the water savings which drought-stricken California needs.

In a nationally televised interview on the Public Broadcasting System "MacNeil-Lehrer Report," Brown said voluntary individual water conservation is the key to surviving California's worst drought of the century.

"What I would like to see is that we minimize the disruption to the economy and to jobs while we maximize the personal curtailment and consumption," Brown said.

He said without serious consequences large water savings can be achieved by conservation of individuals at home. But a curtailment of water to agriculture, processing plants and some industries means a loss of jobs.

Talking about rationing, Brown said: "I'm very slow to embark on a coercive effort on high. More paper out of Sacramento is not quite what's needed. What is required is an outpouring of public spirit that will enable us to weather what has become a difficult situation."

Brown also said he thinks water may be a more serious national problem than energy.

In another development, Brown sent a Mailgram to all local California water officials Friday asking them to let him know by Thursday what conservation measures they have taken.

In his Mailgram, the governor said, "The people and the land of California face a drought unprecedented in our history. Rain may come, but if it does not, we must be prepared."

GOP hopefuls test support '78 campaigns are under way

By DOUG WILLIS
AP Political Writer

SACRAMENTO — California's next general election is well over a year away, but the campaign already is under way.

Four potential candidates for governor and two for lieutenant governor are hosting receptions, calling news conferences and lining up meetings with supporters at the Republican state convention this weekend in Sacramento.

And half-a-dozen others are testing the waters for prospective support for those and other offices.

"I'LL BE making a decision in 60 to 90 days about running for governor," said Assemblyman Ken Maddy of Fresno, somewhat bemused by the thought that waiting until April 1977 might make him "a late entrant" in the June 7, 1978, gubernatorial primary.

Three other contenders — Los Angeles Police Chief Ed Davis, State Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger and San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson — already are running hard for governor, although all are officially undeclared because of election laws.

In the race for lieutenant governor, serious campaigns are being organized by Assemblyman Mike Antonovich, 37, a conservative and a former college instructor from Glendale, and Assemblyman Dixon Arnett, 39, a moderate and a former Stanford University administrator from Redwood City.

The competition for 1978 races has center stage at the weekend convention, in part because there is little competition for the major party offices at stake in the convention.

McComb's wife gets control of his estate

Associated Press

The wife of suspended California Supreme Court Justice Marshall F. McComb was named temporary conservator of his estate Friday.

Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Neil A. Lake named Margaret McComb, 67, to handle the affairs of her 82-year-old husband until a Feb. 28 hearing on permanent control of the estate.

Mrs. McComb, dressed in black, took the witness stand and told the court her husband had decided not to contest her action.

She said she asked him earlier this week if he approved, and he told her: "Of course, you always do the right thing." Neither McComb nor any of his lawyers was present.

Brown's 'approach' to school finance backed SACRAMENTO (AP) — The State Board of Education endorsed the "conceptual approach" of Gov. Brown's school finance proposal Friday, but took no position on its $3.3-billion cost.

Aides say Brown's five-year plan would narrow that gap to below 4 to 1, but wouldn't eliminate it. The governor says that should be enough of an improvement to satisfy the court.

The plan would freeze the tax rates of some high-wealth districts and channel some of their revenue, and virtually all new state school aid, to low-wealth districts.

Brown is proposing about $1.2 billion in new state aid for the fifth year of the plan and a total of $3.3 billion for all five years. Teachers' groups say that's not enough.

$100 of each other in revenues. Currently some districts can raise 33 times as much as others with the same tax rate.

A resolution adopted unanimously by the board agreed with Brown's approach of seeking "substantial" rather than total compliance with the State Supreme Court's Serrano decision.

That decision said the state's system of school finance based on local property taxes discriminated against districts with little taxable wealth.

Under an acceptable system, the court said, districts levying the same tax rate would be within

IN HIS Mailgram, the governor said, "The people and the land of California face a drought unprecedented in our history. Rain may come, but if it does not, we must be prepared."

Brown asked water districts how much they would have conserved by March 15, how much less water they expected this year, what uses they expected to curtail and what suggestions did they have.

Earlier in the day the governor went to Marin County, one of the spots hit hardest by the state's prolonged drought, and said by late next week the state should have recommendations on the water shortage.

ON THE federal level, the regional Small Business Administration has asked that 23 California counties be declared disaster areas, making small firms eligible for long-term, low-interest loans.

Politicians also have proposed legislation ranging from $25 million worth of free-water-saving devices for homeowners to authority for local districts to order rationing in anticipation of shortages, rather than waiting for a lack of water before acting.

Brown met for about 90 minutes with Bay Area water officials, saying he wanted their recommendations on how state efforts could minimize the impact of the water shortage. The water leaders gave Brown a long list of possible solutions.

SAN FRANCISCO — A series of bombings and threats by one of the Bay Area's more enigmatic terrorist groups has frightened public leaders to the extent that City Hall is armed like a fortress and top city officials have 24-hour police protection.

No one in this area has yet been killed or seriously injured in the more than 40 bombings and attempted bombings over the last 2½ years that the New World Liberation Front has said it was responsible for. But that may be more luck than planning, because many of the explosions were powerful enough to maim or kill.

A spokesman for Mayor George Moscone called the City Hall security measures "unfortunate but necessary" and added that the mayor "does not view them as permanent, only necessary until we catch them or they move away." The tightening of access to City Hall — there are metal detectors at the entrances, and the corridors are patrolled by teams of policemen — indicates the seriousness with which local, state and federal officials have come to take the terrorist bomb threats.

Police were assigned to guard the 11 members of the Board of Supervisors after a bomb misfired outside the home of Supervisor Dianne Feinstein on Dec. 14.

The mayor, district attorney and City Hall were added to the protection list late last month after Dist. Atty. Joseph Freitas Jr.'s car was bombed in front of his home, death threats were made against five city officials and an assistant U.S. attorney and shots were fired into the real estate office of Supervisor John Barbagelata.

All these attacks came within days of the indictment and arrest of Jacques Rogers, self-styled courier for the underground terrorists and belongs to an alleged nonviolent above-ground unit of the NWLF.

Officials are reluctant to discuss how much they know about the group, although they hint, as one city official said, that "we know a lot more about the terrorists" than they think.

"The problem of telling the public where we are at in an investigation is that we are also telling the terrorists," said James L. Browning Jr., U.S. attorney for Northern California, who successfully prosecuted bandit-heiress Patricia Hearst.

Although some leftist groups believe that the New World group may be composed of right-wing "provocateurs," most law enforcement officials and many informed citizens assume that they are inheritors of the left-wing terrorist practices that have existed in this area since the mid-1960s.

The most famous of these groups was the Symbionese Liberation Army, which kidnaped Miss Hearst three years ago. But there have been many others, including the Red Guerrilla Family, the Black Guerrilla Family and the Emiliano Zapata Unit, that have taken credit for the hundreds of bombings in the area in the 1970s.

It is generally believed that the NWLF, which has used more than nine unit names since its first claim of a bombing attempt in August 1974, concealed around the SLA's Emily and William Harris and Patricia Hearst after the SLA was all but destroyed during the shootout in Los Angeles a few months earlier.

Long Beach, Calif., Sat., Feb. 12, 1977
INDEPENDENT, PRESS-TELEGRAM—A-5

A tape recording made by Harris after the shoot-out said the group was taking up the outfit's banner. Radicals who have provided assistance to earlier groups were drawn to more decisive action by the Harris, according to this analysis, and eventually began using bombings as a means to denounce U.S. involvement in Chile and the role of large U.S. corporations at home and abroad.

Most officials believe there is only one underground unit in the NWLF and the name changes are meant to imply a larger, more diverse organization than really exists.

Browning said the whole organization probably "has less than 100 hard core members."

Blood types seen as link to mental illness

Knight News Service

Is there something in the blood that may lead to mental illness?

The latest in a series of psychiatric studies suggests anew that the answer to that question is yes.

The study, described in the February American Journal of Psychiatry, involved psychiatric patients at three Danish hospitals.

The research team, headed by Dr. Robert Shapiro, concentrated on a group of mentally ill persons who are manic-depressives, and showed a clear association between blood types "O" and "A" and two varieties of the disease.

Manic-depressives are psychotics whose functioning is so impaired it interferes greatly with the capacity to meet the ordinary demands of life.

Here are some of the symptoms Shapiro and his colleagues look for to demonstrate the manic stage — a "clearly elated mood" plus at least one of these:

Grandiose thoughts and statements, marked inability to sleep, suddenly increased drive, increasing muscle movement (such as the inability to sit still), talking faster than normal, increased irritability and a tendency to skip from one idea to another repeatedly while talking.

You could still be manic without a clearly elated mood, but Shapiro would require four of the other symptoms.

Here are some symptoms of the depressive state: A fixed depressed mood (the person who resists doing anything) plus two of these other symptoms: day-night mood swings, early morning waking, decreased drive and initiative, prominent guilt feelings or ideas and feelings of worthlessness.

Using some other tests, psychiatrists can draw sharp distinctions between manic-depressives and other types of psychotics, such as schizophrenics and paranoid reactions. And Shapiro and his colleagues used these tests to exclude other psychotics from the study.

They found a highly significant association between type "O" blood and what they termed "bipolar" manic depressives, which they defined as someone with one clearly manic episode and one depressive episode. (Episodes can last for many weeks.) And 70 per cent of the bipolar cases in the study had type "O" blood.

And they found an association between type "A" blood and what they termed depression and no manic episodes. And 65 per cent of all the "unipolar" cases are from the "A" group.

Moreover, the reverse also was unexpectedly true. They found significantly fewer patients than expected of blood type "A" in the bipolar group, only 23 per cent, and fewer than expected — (though not meeting exacting statistical tests) — of type "O" patients in the unipolar group, 22 per cent.

Harsh winter breeding depression and fears

By PATRICIA O'BRIEN

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — There are no snowmen in Buffalo, no ice castles, no kids out making "angels" in the snow. Not this winter.

"I haven't seen a single snowman," said Mary Jane Solomon, a doctor's receptionist in that beleaguered city. "The kids are scared, because they've sensed our fears. They know winter isn't fun anymore."

The fact that winter hasn't been any fun for a major part of the country this year is contributing to widespread psychological problems, say mental health experts.

"We're getting alarmed," said Dr. C.J. Frederick, chief of Emergency Mental Health and Disaster Assistance Programs for the National Institutes of Mental Health. "Symptoms are appearing everywhere."

NIMH polled 600 regional Health, Education and Welfare offices, mental health clinics and alcoholism clinics this week to get a focus on what the harshest winter of the century is doing to people emotionally.

"Everything is showing up," said Dr. Frederick. "Depression, anxiety, more drinking, child abuse, marital problems — all of it."

Even the temporary spell of sunny skies and warmer weather of mid-February isn't helping much. "There's great apprehension of flooding along places like the Ohio and Allegheny rivers," he said. "And we're just beginning to get ripples on the psychological effects of the drought in California."

At this point, the principal complaint of Buffalo, Chicago and Pittsburgh residents is depression born of isolation — a feeling of being closed off from the world.

"We can't drive anywhere between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. unless there are three passengers in the car, except for an emergency," said Mrs. Solomon. "It's the strangest feeling. Boy, I've learned something awful. I CAN'T go where I want to go. I CAN'T be sure I'll have enough food. I CAN'T be sure I'm going to be warm. It makes me stop and think how quickly everything can be taken away from me."

"I'm not able to stand it anymore," said Diane Wuycheck of Pittsburgh. "When I'm home, I can't even go out to empty the garbage, it's so cold."

The inability to get out of the house, the foolishness of even taking a stroll to the corner, is turning many a home into an emotional pressure cooker. "My children have missed 30 days of school," said Buffalo secretary Janet Haskins. "They can't go anywhere, and they've run out of things to do. They've gotten to the point where they don't like each other anymore."

In general, cold-climate dwellers are resigned to a certain amount of winter confinement, but anyone can be pushed past a tolerance point, said Dr. Frederick.

It's important to remember there are two kinds of depression, cautioned Pittsburgh psychiatrist Abraham Twerski — the normal kind suffered after a reversal or loss, and the kind that is way out of proportion to real causes.

"This winter is causing very understandable depression," he said. "But most of it isn't sickness. For one thing, the isolation isn't bringing clinical despair and hopelessness, because it is shared. Turn on the radio or television, and you know everybody's in the same boat."

It's too early to know specifically how the weather will affect paranoia and suicide rates. Psychiatrists are particularly concerned about the elderly, the jobless and former mental patients who may have less emotional resilience.

What is bothering many people right now is the fact that winter is far from over.

New connection to legion disease

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Evidence linking a mysterious outbreak of illness nine years ago in Michigan to bacteria like those found in the "legionnaires' disease" of last summer was reported Friday by federal scientists.

The report, from the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, also gave additional evidence that American Legionnaires who became ill after a Philadelphia convention were infected with the still-unidentified bacteria. The outbreak killed 29 persons.

The bacteria were discovered shortly after Christmas by scientists at the center who were reviewing the evidence from the legionnaires outbreak.

Scientists said the bacteria were clearly present in many of the victims and probably caused the illness, although this has not been proven conclusively.

Last month, when discovery of the bacteria was announced, the scientists reported that these germs were linked not only to legionnaires' disease, but also to an outbreak of pneumonia at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington in 1965. The link to the mysterious St. Elizabeth's outbreak was made by discovering antibodies to the bacteria in the pneumonia victims' blood samples, stored frozen at the center since 1965.

Recently the scientists also tested blood samples preserved from an outbreak in Pontiac, Michigan, and found antibodies to the presumed legionnaires' disease bacteria in those samples as well.

In spite of intensive search by federal, state and local health officers, the cause of the Pontiac outbreak was never found. It occurred in July among 144 men and women who worked in or visited a single health department building in Pontiac. The common symptoms were chills and fever lasting two to four days, but, unlike the legionnaires' disease, there were no deaths and no severe pneumonia.

MELTING SNOWPACK on northern slope of narrow valley near Welch, W. Va., threatens crude earth-and-rock dam (lower right) that protects Welch, with population of 3,800, and closer-by Hemphill, a mining town of 100. —AP Wirephoto

Evacuations planned as snow melts W. Va. dam-break crisis looms

WELCH, W. Va. (AP) — Officials were preparing evacuation plans Friday as melting snow and spring water fed the small stream of Mod Branch, sending it rising against a chain of five crude, earthen dams holding millions of gallons of water above homes near this coal-mining town.

Up to half an inch of rain was forecast for today and temperatures in the 60s were melting a snowpack of up to 10 inches on the shaded northern slopes of the narrow valley holding the stream in McDowell County in southern West Virginia.

The National Weather Service said the snowmelt could be equivalent to up to five inches of rain. And it said the long-range forecast was for continued warming and a chance of rain through Tuesday.

"The alarming thing is that there's no place for the water to go if the stream fills," said George Hall, a Department of Natural Resources engineer. "If water spills over the top, this kind of dam would probably break."

The biggest of the impoundments holds an estimated five million gallons, said Don Stroupe, plant manager of the Welch Water Works. The smallest holds about one million gallons.

Water was reported already near the top of some of the dams.

About 20 houses cling to the hillsides immediately below the dams. Below them is the coal mining town of Hemphill, with a population of about 100. From there, Mod Branch flows around the edge of Welch and into the Tug Fork River, which frequently floods parts of Welch, a town with a population of about 3,800.

Hall said the dams were constructed six to seven years ago by the city of Welch — without benefit of consulting engineers — for water storage. They have no spillways.

"They are just a hodgepodge of everything from clay to boulders," Hall said.

They are among 30 crude dams in the state being monitored around the clock by the state water resources department, the Army Corps of Engineers and the U.S. Soil Conservation Service. But there are 135 impoundments in the state considered unsafe, and Gov. Jay Rockefeller has ordered them all checked.

Many are coal-waste dams similar to the one at Buffalo Creek, west of here in Logan County, which gave way five years ago this month and unleashed a wall of water and debris that killed 125 persons.

Phil Zinn, a hydrologist with the weather service in Charleston, said conditions were being monitored "very closely."

"As of now, it is just a waiting situation," Zinn said. "The potential for danger is there. There is an awful lot of water in the snow in the mountain areas of West Virginia."

8 in 10 turning down thermostats, making big gas saving, FEA reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Administration reported indications Friday that people are turning down thermostats as President Carter asked, and are saving substantial amounts of natural gas.

The FEA said eight out of ten households reported setting daytime thermostats at 68 degrees Fahrenheit or less in a special poll conducted for the FEA by the Gallup organization last weekend.

The FEA said that was an improvement over two years ago, when thermostats in only five of every 10 homes were set at reduced levels. Carter had urged that thermostats be set at 65 degrees.

The agency said its own survey of 22 gas distribution companies brought estimates of natural gas savings ranging from four to 13 per cent from the lowering of residential thermostats and other conservation measures.

The FEA also estimated that household heating costs will run some 35 to 45 per cent higher this winter than last winter on the average, depending on whether temperatures return to normal or continue abnormally cold.

But the estimates represented an average for all residential fuels. Actual costs to any household will vary widely depending on geographical location, local weather, and the type of fuel used.

The FEA poll showed that only 56 per cent of the public east of the Rocky Mountains thought the nation's fuel shortage was real.

That very question was debated at a conference of the Consumer Federation of America.

James F. Flug, director of the Energy Action Committee, a citizen consumer group, argued that the natural gas shortage is unnecessary and could be resolved through greater federal regulation.

George H. Lawrence, president of the American Gas Association, a trade organization of pipeline manufacturers and distributors, contended just the contrary. He said the gas shortage is real and can be eased only by ending federal regulation of new gas supplies.

Meanwhile, an additional 3 billion cubic feet of natural gas from Canada has been approved for export to meet U.S. fuel needs.

A Canadian National Energy Board spokesman said Friday the gas will be shipped over a 60-day period to Montana Power Co. of Butte, Mont., freeing other gas supplies for shipment to the Midwest.

Tests indicate chemical peril FDA bars some plastic bottles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration withdrew its approval Friday of plastic soft drink and beer bottles that contain a chemical called acrylonitrile because a new study indicates the chemical may be harmful.

The acrylonitrile bottles have been test marketed in some areas by Coca Cola and Pepsi Cola, but are not in general use nationally for carbonated beverages.

Plastic containers with the same chemical are used in margarine tubs and vegetable oil bottles. The FDA said it plans to propose new rules lowering the amount of acrylonitrile permitted to leak from such tubs and bottles into the foods they contain.

The FDA said its actions were based on an interim report on a study being conducted by the chemical industry.

The report, received by the agency on Jan. 12, indicated that after 13 months some rats fed high doses of acrylonitrile in their drinking water had significantly lowered body weight and other adverse effects, including lesions in the central nervous system and growths in the ear ducts and mammary region, the FDA said.

There is no indication at this point that the chemical causes cancer, a spokesman for the agency said.

In a related action, the FDA refused to prohibit the sale of carbonated beverages and beer in plastic bottles made without acrylonitrile. Such bottles have been in increasing use as soft drink containers in recent years.

The Environmental Defense Fund won a court case forcing the FDA to consider such a ban on grounds that use of plastic bottles increases litter and thus violates the National Environmental Protection Act.

But the agency said Friday that an environmental study indicates the plastic bottles only replace other throwaway bottles and therefore don't increase litter.

The FDA had maintained until Friday that the bottles containing acrylonitrile were safe, and gave its interim approval for their manufacture and use.

An environmental organization, the Natural Resources Defense Council, sued the FDA last year in an attempt to Photos, please!

Ministers often make news, but sometimes it is impossible to find suitable photos. So we are making a double request. The Religion Editor of the Independent, Press-Telegram would like to have glossy, black-and-white photos of every minister in the area. Just send them to the Religion Editor, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

Rev. Don E. Lindblom, executive director of the Long Beach Area Council of Churches, also hopes to build such a photo file of ministers. The address is 1542 E. Seventh St., Long Beach, Calif. 90813.

The photos should be sharp and clearly defined. Preferably they should be pleasing to the subjects. Color won't do; reproduction to black-and-white is a nuisance and always leaves something to be wished.

Each photo should carry precise identification.

8 in 10 turning down thermostats, making big gas saving, FEA reports

The FEA said eight out of ten households reported setting daytime thermostats at 68 degrees Fahrenheit or less in a special poll conducted for the FEA by the Gallup organization last weekend.

The FEA said that was an improvement over two years ago, when thermostats in only five of every 10 homes were set at reduced levels. Carter had urged that thermostats be set at 65 degrees.

Tests indicate chemical peril FDA bars some plastic bottles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration withdrew its approval Friday of plastic soft drink and beer bottles that contain a chemical called acrylonitrile because a new study indicates the chemical may be harmful.

The acrylonitrile bottles have been test marketed in some areas by Coca Cola and Pepsi Cola, but are not in general use nationally for carbonated beverages.

Plastic containers with the same chemical are used in margarine tubs and vegetable oil bottles. The FDA said it plans to propose new rules lowering the amount of acrylonitrile permitted to leak from such tubs and bottles into the foods they contain.

The FDA said its actions were based on an interim report on a study being conducted by the chemical industry.

The report, received by the agency on Jan. 12, indicated that after 13 months some rats fed high doses of acrylonitrile in their drinking water had significantly lowered body weight and other adverse effects, including lesions in the central nervous system and growths in the ear ducts and mammary region, the FDA said.

There is no indication at this point that the chemical causes cancer, a spokesman for the agency said.

In a related action, the FDA refused to prohibit the sale of carbonated beverages and beer in plastic bottles made without acrylonitrile. Such bottles have been in increasing use as soft drink containers in recent years.

The Environmental Defense Fund won a court case forcing the FDA to consider such a ban on grounds that use of plastic bottles increases litter and thus violates the National Environmental Protection Act.

But the agency said Friday that an environmental study indicates the plastic bottles only replace other throwaway bottles and therefore don't increase litter.

The FDA had maintained until Friday that the bottles containing acrylonitrile were safe, and gave its interim approval for their manufacture and use.

An environmental organization, the Natural Resources Defense Council, sued the FDA last year in an attempt to block the use of acrylonitrile bottles, claiming the chemical is closely related to others known to cause cancer. That case has not yet come to trial.

The withdrawal of the agency's approval of the bottles is effective immediately and will remain in effect at least until the study is over.

The proposal to sharply reduce the amount of permitted leakage from margarine tubs and other food containers will be published officially next week and will not take effect until the industry and other interested parties have had an opportunity to comment.

Photos, please!

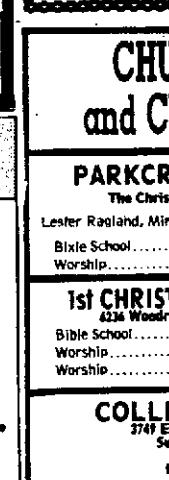

Ministers often make news, but sometimes it is impossible to find suitable photos. So we are making a double request. The Religion Editor of the Independent, Press-Telegram would like to have glossy, black-and-white photos of every minister in the area. Just send them to the Religion Editor, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

Rev. Don E. Lindblom, executive director of the Long Beach Area Council of Churches, also hopes to build such a photo file of ministers. The address is 1542 E. Seventh St., Long Beach, Calif. 90813.

The photos should be sharp and clearly defined. Preferably they should be pleasing to the subjects. Color won't do; reproduction to black-and-white is a nuisance and always leaves something to be wished. Each photo should carry precise identification.

Charismatic school of theology

Melodyland music is the Gospel

J. Rodman Williams (inset) is president of Melodyland School of Theology. The Melodyland Christian Center looks something like a huge circus tent. It can and often does seat 8,500 worshippers. At right, young Lyle Story teaches New Testament Greek to students of the Melodyland School of Theology. He is well qualified because his father is a professor of Greek and he grew up with the language.

In the Southland, often called "the new Babylon" and worse names, theology is flourishing. Young men and women crowd into the schools to learn about God — some because they hope to become ministers, others just because they want to know.

A good example of this religious enthusiasm is the Melodyland School of Theology, which was founded four years ago by the parent Melodyland Christian Center. It now has 612 students including a brand new high school.

"The ideal of this school is charismatic renewal," said J. Rodman Williams, president. "We are evangelical, but not exactly fundamentalist. That word has too many definitions."

"Charismatic," the gift of the Holy Spirit, means to many Christians faith healing, speaking with tongues, a general emotional and ecstatic response to religion. This is not the full story of Melodyland.

The school believes in tough scholarship and practical training for church work. Courses include such subjects as Biblical Greek and Hebrew, cults and the occult, sermon making, communications, Biblical history and the history of Christianity, counseling, church management, music ministry.

The professors and adjunct professors have impressive qualifications.

"This is not just a graduate school," Dr. Williams said. "Most of our students are in their 20s, but we have all ages from high school to retired. We have a retired admiral and a retired Army major."

"We believe in women in the ministry and we have 162 female students."

The chancellor is Ralph A. Wilkerson, founder of the Melodyland Christian Center.

The students look like any students although perhaps a bit better scrubbed and neat than some. They have their fun, such as beach parties.

"The orientation is different," Dr. Williams said. "There is a high level of Christian commitment. There is no intense competitiveness. Among us is a spirit of helpfulness. Our students love one another."

The School of Theology is only a part of the massive Melodyland program. The Christian Center, which started 17 years ago with a handful of members, purchased the huge Melodyland Theatre in the Round. The theatre failed, perhaps because it is adjacent to Disneyland and not far from many other entertainment attractions.

The theatre remains a theatre in the round but with many improvements. A balcony has been added. The adjacent bar was turned into a reception room. The church now seats 3,800 persons. Much of its appeal is to young people.

This is not the time to attempt to explain the total impact of Melodyland. Its Hotline night and day helps troubled people. There is a full program for young people including a Ranch.

The School of Theology, a late arrival in the field, reports high cooperation from other schools and churches. Southern California is blessed with numerous schools of theology.

A brief visit gives the impression of a school that is on the go. There is a building program of importance. But more than that, there is a spirit of enthusiasm.

One church increases missions

NEW YORK (AP) — For more than a decade, major Protestant denominations gradually have reduced the number of foreign missionaries maintained overseas. But in at least one case this year, the trend is being reversed.

The Rev. Dr. David M. Stowe, head of the board which spends $4.5 million annually for missions, nearly half of it in grants to indigenous church programs, said in explaining the shift:

"In this period when religious liberty and other human rights are threatened, it is more necessary than ever before to maintain Christian witness to other countries. We must build a network of Christian communication with our partner churches."

Episcopalians seek peace in conflict

EDITOR'S NOTE — Reporter Hinman was a convention delegate from a Long Beach parish.

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Staff Writer

As Episcopalians of the Los Angeles Diocese met last week to chart their course for the coming year, schism was a word seldom heard during two days of proceedings at the new Bonaventure Hotel and in nearby St. Paul's Cathedral.

But with three area parishes currently threatening secession from diocese and national church over the recently approved ordination of women, the word could not have been far from the hearts and minds of nearly 600 delegates to this 82nd annual meeting.

Chancellor R. Bradbury Clark told of legal action pending against the trio of breakaways. And Bishop Robert C. Rusk held out a conciliatory hand, promising to meet and talk with the dissidents — a step yet to be taken as this week ends.

EARLIER, in his major convention address, the bishop urged his congregations to be "effective agents of calm and understanding" as Los Angeles schools are racially integrated in coming months.

He called on his flock to overcome apathy, to love one another within the church while creatively using its diverse membership in furthering goals.

Late in a lengthy policy-enunciating speech, almost swamped in a flood of other ideas, were these significant, understated sentences:

"I have made my mistakes since becoming bishop coadjutor," Rusk said. "I did not say 'No' often enough. Now I find I must if sanity is to reign."

Whether he referred to actions involving the three secessionists remained unclear.

There was a spate of routine business to be transacted: budgets to be approved, officers elected or appointed, reports heard, programs detailed. It was an agenda full of business new, old and unfinished, and participants would conclude that they found little in it that was unexpected.

RESOLUTIONS dealing with broad ethical-spiritual questions — as opposed to inhouse matters — were an entirely different matter, however. It should come as no surprise to learn that Episcopalians are as deeply divided over today's heated issues as any other Americans.

For instance, the question of amnesty for Viet Nam draft evaders and deserters, as dealt with by a denomination historically numbering thousands of military men and their families in its membership.

Following a lengthy, heated floor fight, 273 delegates voted to commend President Carter for his recent partial-amnesty policy while asking for its expansion to include all resisters. Opposing this position were 237 persons, an almost even split.

By a similarly slim division, a resolution calling for abolition of the death penalty "for whatever cause," was voted down — 286 naysayers to 254 supporters of the measure.

REJECTED voice votes were two resolutions dealing with the armaments issue.

The first of these averred that "the Soviet Union has achieved military superiority over the U.S." and called on President Carter "to restore American military superiority as soon as possible."

The second urged President and Congress to quit selling arms "to other nations for whatever purpose."

One resolution demanding an absolute prohibition against ordaining known homosexuals to the priesthood was withdrawn before the convention. Another such request, drafted in milder, more pacific language, was tabled on the floor. Thus, the church's pre-convention position on this issue — whatever that was — remains in effect.

Unbiased Easter

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Conference of Christians and Jews has issued an Easter narrative "free of all anti-Judaic accusations or implications."

The narrative, prepared in cooperation with 25 Protestant and Catholic theologians, was described as "not a rewriting of Scripture," but "Biblically sound and theologically based." An official said it could have a profound influence in "eradication of 'contempt for the Jews' which has for too long been entangled" in the central festival.

How to start right

Late on the last afternoon of the old year, one of our country's most successful bankers sat restlessly at his desk. His secretary and other employees had been sent home early so that they might prepare for the New Year's Eve celebration. He himself should have left his office much sooner so that he could dress to attend a dinner party to which he had been invited.

Yet, somehow, he could not leave. He had a sense of things left undone, a vague stirring of un-realized fears. He had always been plagued by an insecure feeling about decisions made. He was continually apprehensive that perhaps these decisions would not turn out right. So, on this particular evening, he found himself beginning to go over each of his business actions of the day and beginning to be afraid that he had made many mistakes, not only during that day, but throughout the year that was just coming to an end.

Being a methodical person, he reached for a pad and a pencil. He filled the first page with a list of the decisions in which he might have been mistaken during that day. It was a long list. On the next page, he compiled the previous day's decisions, but it was a smaller list. And, on the page following, he wrote out a still smaller list covering the day before that. When he came to the fourth day previous, he could remember only one decision that troubled him. Further back, he could recall no decisions that had turned out too badly. The sum total of things was in his favor.

Disgusted with himself for these fruitless concerns, he wadded the papers up into a ball and threw them at the wall opposite him. The papers bounced off the wall and fell into a nearby wastebasket. And, as the banker watched those papers drop into the basket, he felt a sense of relief, as though a weight had been lifted from his shoulders.

"You know," he said, as he told me this story, "I felt like a new man. And I've felt better ever since. I realized that there was nothing I could do about my past mistakes and that there just wasn't any point in being afraid of them. I couldn't even remember most of them after a few days. The thing I had to do was to look forward into the future." EP This man had learned a basic truth. That truth is that it is unhealthy to carry into today and preserve for tomorrow the mistakes and failures of yesterday. Today is designed to carry its own burdens and no more. The Scriptures say that sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof, or the responsibility therefor.

Sir William Osler, a great physician, once lectured in 1906 at Yale University. What he said on that occasion is as wise and fresh as when first uttered. He told the assembled students that before they learned anything else, they ought to learn this: Live one day at a time.

He had just made an ocean voyage and he described in his speech how a great ocean liner is so built that its captain, by merely pressing a button, can bring down great iron doors to shut off one bulkhead from another.

Episcopalians seek peace in conflict

EDITOR'S NOTE — Reporter Hinman was a convention delegate from a Long Beach parish.

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Staff Writer

As Episcopalians of the Los Angeles Diocese met last week to chart their course for the coming year, schism was a word seldom heard during two days of proceedings at the new Bonaventure Hotel and in nearby St. Paul's Cathedral.

But with three area parishes currently threatening secession from diocese and national church over the recently approved ordination of women, the word could not have been far from the hearts and minds of nearly 600 delegates to this 82nd annual meeting.

Chancellor R. Bradbury Clark told of legal action pending against the trio of breakaways. And Bishop Robert C. Rusk held out a conciliatory hand, promising to meet and talk with the dissidents — a step yet to be taken as this week ends.

EARLIER, in his major convention address, the bishop urged his congregations to be "effective agents of calm and understanding" as Los Angeles schools are racially integrated in coming months.

He called on his flock to overcome apathy, to love one another within the church while creatively using its diverse membership in furthering goals.

Late in a lengthy policy-enunciating speech, almost swamped in a flood of other ideas, were these significant, understated sentences:

"I have made my mistakes since becoming bishop coadjutor," Rusk said. "I did not say 'No' often enough. Now I find I must if sanity is to reign."

PRESIDENT CARTER, preceded by his wife, Rosalynn, and daughter, Amy, waves as he prepares to board new Airborne Command Post, a converted Boeing 747, at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., Friday, for first trip to Georgia as President.

Vietnam relations designed to insulate his personal financial holdings from presidential decisions and announced that he was sending his 78-year-old mother to represent him at the funeral of the president of India.

Carter chose for his trip to Georgia a Boeing 747 jet outfitted as a flying command post for use in a nuclear attack. No president had previously flown on the Air Force plane.

The President also:
—Signed an executive order setting up a nine-member commission to oversee the search for a new FBI director within the next 90 days;

—Met with his ambassadors directing negotiations over the future of the Panama Canal;

—Spoke in the White House with New York City Mayor Abraham D. Beame about the city's financial situation. Beame later said he told Carter he expects no immediate federal help in paying off $1 billion in short-term loans;

—Nominated Daniel J. Meador, a University of Virginia Law School professor, to the new post of assistant attorney general for improvements in the administration of justice.

Spokesman Jody Powell announced that Jack Eckerd, head of the GSA since Oct. 15, 1975, would be leaving his post despite an announcement Monday that he had accepted Carter's invitation to remain in office.

Eckerd, a Republican who built up a drugstore chain in Florida, was leaving after being told that he could not choose his own deputies.

Powell acknowledged that Eckerd—after Eckerd had met with Carter and been asked to stay on—had the impression he would be given free rein in picking assistants. Powell called this "an honest misunderstanding."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., has recommended Robert Griffin, a career civil servant who has spent 25 of his 33 years as a federal employee with the GSA, for the job of deputy administrator.

Griffin is now directing planning for the John F. Kennedy Library in Boston and Powell said there was no plan to give him the No. 1 job.

The trust agreement governing Carter's holdings states that its chief purpose is to isolate him "from those of his assets which are most likely to be affected by actions of the federal government and its agencies."

The document gives trustee Charles Kirbo, a long-time Carter friend and adviser, broad powers to sell or lease the President's properties. It also sets forth three Carter requests:

—That Kirbo, in deciding what to do about the family peanut warehouse business, "be sensitive" to the potential economic consequences for younger brother Billy Carter, managing partner in the business.

—That Kirbo attempt to keep open the possibility that one of the President's sons, especially James Earl Carter III, might want to take an active role in his father's businesses.

—That the President "has an affinity for those farmlands which are owned by Carter's Farms Inc." and hopes the purpose of the trust can be carried out without requiring their sale.

Carter's mother, Lillian, will be accompanied on the trip to New Delhi by the President's son, Chip. The funeral for President Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed will take place Sunday.

The President's mother, a registered nurse, served in the Peace Corps in India in the mid-1960s.

During the meeting with the Panama Canal team, headed by Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and Ambassador Sol Linowitz, Carter said: "I hope the Panamanians are ready to negotiate in good faith and I assume they are."

Both Bunker and Linowitz leave for Panama on Monday.

Denies 'right' to federal payments for operation U.S. argues for abortion law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department told the Supreme Court on Friday that Medicaid or Medi-Cal recipients and doctors have no legal standing to bring suit against a law forbidding federal payments for most abortions.

Department attorneys argued that the federal statute has no direct impact on poor women seeking abortions or on doctors and family-planning clinics which perform abortions for indigent women.

Acting Solicitor General Daniel M. Friedman and other department lawyers outlined that position in a brief filed to the court in a case which arose in New York.

Last September, Congress passed the Hyde Amendment prohibiting the use of federal welfare money to finance all abortions except those performed when the pregnancy endangered the mother's life.

The New York Planned Parenthood organization and a group of Medicaid recipients and doctors filed suit, alleging the law deprived poor women of their right to obtain abortions.

A federal district judge last October blocked enforcement of the law, and that means federal money has helped finance abortions in virtually all states.

The Justice Department is representing the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in challenging the lower court injunction.

"The federal government does not provide assistance directly to Medicaid beneficiaries," Friedman noted.

Instead, federal welfare money is sent to the states, which set up their own program of paying poor people for various medical services.

The Hyde Amendment does not prevent the states from providing welfare money for abortions; it only prevents the federal government from reimbursing the states for abortion payments, he argued.

The Hyde Amendment "does no more than deny federal funding for abortions," the government said. "It does not place any prohibition or impose any sanction upon the performance of abortions."

The department said a woman has a constitutional right to privacy, entitling her to seek an abortion without government interference. But this does not translate into a right to receive an abortion, the government asserted.

Department lawyers conceded that the withdrawal of federal support could influence states to stop providing payments for abortions.

But "there is no discrimination here against indigents as a class," the department contended.

"The government has no constitutional obligation to relieve all the burdens of poverty."

Carter 'delays' concussion-bomb delivery to Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration has reached a tentative decision to delay delivery of advanced concussion bombs to Israel, congressional sources said Friday.

A formal announcement is expected before the start of Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's "fact-finding" mission to the Middle East next week.

Vance briefed the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on the aerosol CBU-72 concussion bombs and other aspects of U.S. foreign policy at a two-hour closed session Friday.

Vance, who is due in Israel late Tuesday, told reporters that he will complete his recommendation on the bombs before beginning his six-nation tour. The final decision will be up to President Carter.

in the Southwest, California's traditional source of natural gas.

The Sohio proposal depends on converting several existing natural gas pipelines to crude oil pipelines to link Long Beach with Midland, Tex.

The report also states that approval of the Transprovincial pipeline project across Canada "would solve the serious oil supply problem in the (midwestern and eastern) states, provide the most efficient transcontinental outlet for movement of surplus Alaskan crude and reduce pressure on California to permit an unacceptable version of the Sohio project."

State Air Resources Board Chairman Tom Quinn has argued that unloading and storage of great quantities of Alaskan oil in Long Beach would exceed state and federal air quality standards and degrade the Los Angeles Basin's already marginal air quality.

Citizen action groups in Long Beach have objected to the Sohio plan on grounds of potential air quality, safety and environmental hazards.

San Francisco Bay oil spill spreading

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A major oil spill spread for miles on San Francisco Bay, left oil-stained beaches and threatened waterfowl Friday as the Coast Guard fought to clean up more than 15,000 gallons of oil.

Patches of oil spotted bay waters from Pier 70, two miles south of the Bay Bridge, to the open seas beyond the Golden Gate.

The heavy fuel oil was spilled late Thursday after a valve failed on the drydocked container ship Hawaiian Progress at the Bethlehem Steel Shipyards.

Slain gangland figure was under subpoena in L.A.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — West Coast underworld leaders will be questioned about the gangland-style killing of reputed Mafia figure Frank Bompensiero, police said Friday.

Bompensiero, 71, was shot in the head four times on a sidewalk outside his Pacific Beach apartment Thursday night.

An attorney said Bompensiero, whose record of arrests goes back to 1928, was under subpoena to testify in Los Angeles-area felony cases. These reportedly included a Los Angeles extortion trial set for Tuesday and a Santa Monica murder case.

The Sacramento Bee said Friday he had been an FBI informant for "at least 10 years" and that the Department of Justice had tried to get him to surface to aid in prosecutions.

BUT THE FBI resisted, the Bee said, contending that "with easy access to top Mafia figures, he was one of the bureau's best informants."

There have been reports that Bompensiero was involved in a struggle for Mafia leadership as a result of the death of Nick Licata in Los Angeles in 1974.

"We'll be talking to a lot of people in connection with this case, including known associates and former active members of organized crime," said Police Lt. Charles Schilder.

Deputy Police Chief James Connole described it as "a typical gangland execution," apparently without witnesses.

A silencer may have been used on the .22-caliber pistol, since nobody reported hearing gunfire, Schilder said.

As Bompensiero strolled alone, a nightly ritual, he was shot while passing an alley. Connole said it appeared that the first shot felled Bompensiero and that he was shot at least three more times as he lay on the ground.

The spent cartridge cases were nearby, along with a chewed cigar, Bompensiero's trademark.

There was "a quantity of money" still in Bompensiero's pockets, although he left his wallet at home, investigators said.

Bompensiero's widow, Maria Rose, was not placed under special protection, Schilder said.

In several reports of organized crime investigations, including the congressional Kefauver Committee's in 1950, Bompensiero was identified as a business associate of well-known figures in organized crime such as the late Tony Mirabile and the late Jack Dragna. He appeared last November before a Los Angeles federal grand jury investigating pornography, but refused to testify.

The San Diego Evening Tribune said Bompensiero was under subpoena to testify in a murder case and an extortion case in San Diego. But Bompensiero's attorney, Nicolas DePento, would confirm only that Bompensiero was under subpoena.

At a news conference, Schilder said ballistics tests were being made to see if the weapon was the same one used to kill San Diego real estate investor Tamara Rand on Nov. 19, 1975, or Chicago underworld figure Sam Giancana earlier that year.

A silenced .22-caliber pistol was used in each case, and "we don't throw out the possibility that the same hit man did all three," Schilder said.

Nevada rejects ERA; NOW president bitter

CARSON CITY (AP) — The Nevada Assembly rejected the Equal Rights Amendment on Friday, three days after the Nevada Senate narrowly approved the measure.

Anti-ERA spectators cheered as the vote was announced. There was no effort by pro-ERA legislators to seek reconsideration.

The Assembly voted 24 to 15 against the amendment, after an hour of arguments from lawmakers pressing for its approval.

The Senate passed the ERA 11 to 10 on Tuesday.

So far, 35 states have ratified the ERA. Three of those states later voted to rescind their ratifications, but the legality of those votes has not been tested yet.

In order for the ERA to become part of the U.S. Constitution, it must be ratified by at least 38 states no later than March 29, 1979.

In Syracuse, N.Y., Karen DeCrow, president of the National Organization for Women, blamed the defeat on lobbying by the Mormon church and a power struggle between the outgoing governor and the majority leader of the assembly, who is a high official in the church.

"He pulled out all the stops," Ms. DeCrow said of the majority leader. "This is a very frightening illustration of the conflict of church and state."

PRESIDENT CARTER, preceded by his wife, Rosalynn, and daughter, Amy, waves as he prepares to board new Airborne Command Post, a converted Boeing 747, at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., Friday, for first trip to Georgia as President.

Vietnam relations

designed to insulate his personal financial holdings from presidential decisions and announced that he was sending his 78-year-old mother to represent him at the funeral of the president of India.

Carter chose for his trip to Georgia a Boeing 747 jet outfitted as a flying command post for use in a nuclear attack. No president had previously flown on the Air Force plane.

The President also:

- Signed an executive order setting up a nine-member commission to oversee the search for a new FBI director within the next 90 days.
- Met with his ambassadors directing negotiations over the future of the Panama Canal;
- Spoke in the White House with New York City Mayor Abraham D. Beame about the city's financial situation. Beame later said he told Carter he expects no immediate federal help in paying off $1 billion in short-term loans;
- Nominated Daniel J. Meehan, a University of Virginia Law School professor, to the new post of assistant attorney general for improvements in the administration of justice.

Spokesman Jody Powell announced that Jack Eckerd, head of the GSA since Oct. 15, 1975, would be leaving his post despite an announcement Monday that he had accepted Carter's invitation to remain in office.

Eckerd, a Republican who built up a drugstore chain in Florida, was leaving after being told that he could not choose his own deputies.

Powell acknowledged that Eckerd—after Eckerd had met with Carter and been asked to stay on—had the impression he would be given free rein in picking assistants. Powell called this "an honest misunderstanding."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., has recommended Robert Griffin, a career civil servant who has spent 25 of his 33 years as a federal employee with the GSA, for the job of deputy administrator.

Griffin is now directing planning for the John F. Kennedy Library in Boston and Powell said there was no plan to give him the No. 1 job.

The trust agreement governing Carter's holdings states that its chief purpose is to isolate him "from those of his assets which are most likely to be affected by actions of the federal government and its agencies."

The document gives trustee Charles Kirbo, a long-time Carter friend and adviser, broad powers to sell or lease the President's properties. It also sets forth three Carter requests:

- That Kirbo, in deciding what to do about the family peanut warehouse business, "be sensitive" to the potential economic consequences for younger brother Billy Carter, managing partner in the business.
- That Kirbo attempt to keep open the possibility that one of the President's sons, especially James Earl Carter III, might want to take an active role in his father's businesses.
- That the President "has an affinity for those farmlands which are owned by Carter's Farms Inc." and hopes the purpose of the trust can be carried out without requiring their sale.

Carter's mother, Lillian, will be accompanied on the trip to New Delhi by the President's son, Chip. The funeral for President Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed will take place Sunday.

The President's mother, a registered nurse, served in the Peace Corps in India in the mid-1960s.

During the meeting with the Panama Canal team, headed by Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and Ambassador Sol Linowitz, Carter said: "I hope the Panamanians are ready to negotiate in good faith and I assume they are."

Both Bunker and Linowitz leave for Panama on Monday.

Denies 'right' to federal payments for operation U.S. argues for abortion law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department told the Supreme Court on Friday that Medicaid or Medi-Cal recipients and doctors have no legal standing to bring suit against a law forbidding federal payments for most abortions.

Department attorneys argued that the federal statute has no direct impact on poor women seeking abortions or on doctors and family-planning clinics which perform abortions for indigent women.

Acting Solicitor General Daniel M. Friedman and other department lawyers outlined that position in a brief filed to the court in a case which arose in New York.

Last September, Congress passed the Hyde Amendment prohibiting the use of federal welfare money to finance all abortions except those performed when the pregnancy endangered the mother's life.

The New York Planned Parenthood organization and a group of Medicaid recipients and doctors filed suit, alleging the law deprived poor women of their right to obtain abortions.

A federal district judge last October blocked enforcement of the law, and that means federal money has helped finance abortions in virtually all states.

The Justice Department is representing the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in challenging the lower court injunction.

"The federal government does not provide assistance directly to Medicaid beneficiaries," Friedman noted.

Instead, federal welfare money is sent to the states, which set up their own program of paying poor people for various medical services.

The Hyde Amendment does not prevent the states from providing welfare money for abortions; it only prevents the federal government from reimbursing the states for abortion payments, he argued.

The Hyde Amendment "does no more than deny federal funding for abortions," the government said. "It does not place any prohibition or impose any sanction upon the performance of abortions."

The department said a woman has a constitutional right to privacy, entitling her to seek an abortion without government interference. But this does not translate into a right to receive an abortion, the government asserted.

Department lawyers conceded that the withdrawal of federal support could influence states to stop providing payments for abortions.

But "there is no discrimination here against indigents as a class," the department contended.

"The government has no constitutional obligation to relieve all the burdens of poverty."

happy about it

Until 1 p.m. Friday, Long Beach was a 14-horse and one jack-mule city.

But before the day was over, the adjectives no longer applied.

All told, the 15 animals sold for $1,315, with one pony bringing a high of $185. The jack-mule, which is basically a small donkey, went for $55, just five dollars more than the low-bid pony, which was blind in one eye.

The city didn't go into the pony selling business for profit. It can be factually stated that the ponies sort of jumped into its lap.

This came about when L.W. Reed, a pony ride operator at the Pike, an amusement park in downtown Long Beach, who owned the animals, neglected to feed and care for them properly.

This being the case, the Long Beach police, on Nov. 4 of last year, charged him with three counts of cruelty to animals.

In plea bargaining, Reed pleaded guilty to one count on Jan. 10, took a $2,000 fine and three years' probation. He also lost his city license and voluntarily gave up the animals, who at that point were being attended to by city animal shelter employees at the Johnson Stables on West 34th Street.

A group of Boy Scouts who work on a volunteer basis with the city's Division of Animal Regulation helped with the animals' care, spending weekends grooming the ponies and mule.

Since the horses were short of cash, the city footed their food and lodging bills. Having done this for three months, the officials decided to recoup some of the expenses, which are in the neighborhood of $3,000, through an auction held Friday.

Nearly 100 persons were on hand for the sale, and before it was all said and done, there were 14 joyous youngsters, and one joyous old man, standing proudly by their prizes.

"I'm so happy," exclaimed 10-year-old Adriana Nichols. "I'm so glad I don't know what to do. It's always been my dream to have a real live pony and now I have one."

Five-year-old Audrey Sides, whose mother paid $105 for her pony, was nearly speechless with joy, but she managed to say shyly, "I don't know what I'm going to do with him but I hope he lets me ride him."

None of the children were more happy than their new friends than old Milt Brorby, of Torrance, who says he is at least "40 years removed from being a child." Brorby, who is known as the "pony man," bought an old friend of his, Tommy, the jack mule.

"We've been friends for years," he remembered. "He's a wonderful animal and I came all the way from Mexico to buy him back. You see, I've owned him off and on for more than five years. I've sold him five or six times, but I always seem to get him back. I paid $500 for him the first time, and I've sold him for a lot more, but I really think it's a deal getting him for $55."

When asked what he was going to do with the mule next, his reply was to the point: "Sell him."

Sheriff: O.C. jail abuse overblown

Orange County Sheriff Brad Gates told an Assembly committee Friday in Santa Ana that complaints of prisoner mistreatment and abuse in the Orange County Jail are "horror stories" greatly exaggerated.

However, Gates sparked criticism from one legislator when he refused to let reporters accompany committee members on a tour of the jail.

He acknowledged to the Assembly Select Committee on Corrections that there were at least two cases of prisoner abuse by jailers last year that required the dismissal of two deputies.

Assemblyman Richard Alatorre, D-Los Angeles, said he will call similar hearings in San Diego, Los Angeles, Fresno and elsewhere to probe stories of abuses of prisoners.

A young man identified only as "Hal," who said he was 17 when he first "made jail," testified Friday with a red bandana on his face, bandit-style, to mask his features.

He said he was currently in protective custody but previously jailers had left him alone and had refused him a solitary cell. He said he was subsequently seized by other male inmates and raped.

"The jailers passed it off as just another thing," he said.

"Hal" was the only witness who declined to identify himself Friday, and the only one to mask his identity, as almost two dozen men and women described their experiences or told of what happened to their relatives and friends.

They detailed physical abuse, verbal harassment, sexual molesting and solitary confinement.

Many said the punishment

came from jailers for "minor infractions," such as carrying too many cigarettes or matches.

George Grey, a Santa Ana newspaperman who last year wrote a series of articles on jail conditions, told the Assembly committee that prisoner abuse in the Orange County Jail so far has brought 224 claims seeking $115 million and 13 lawsuits asking a total of $24 million in damages, in just the last two years.

Grey criticized the sheriff's academy 13-week "stress training," after which young deputies are assigned as jailers for two years of duty.

"It is the wrong kind of training for them," Grey insisted, "because the primary thrust is martial arts."

He said, "It makes jail a very dangerous place."

Two persons died last year in the Orange County Jail and both cases seemed related to the refusal of jailers to give required prescribed medication or to delays in giving medical attention, the committee was told.

Gates questioned whether the jail should handle "hard core" prisoners and called for "more staffing and facilities for alcoholics" who often wind up in his jail.

Alatorre's committee toured the jail Friday morning, but newsmen were not permitted to accompany the legislators.

Alatorre openly criticized Gates for barring the reporters and said it did not reflect well on him.

"They are responsible persons and understand the liability of invading the privacy of anyone," Alatorre said. "Barring them leads to the suspicion of what exactly is going on."

—'My Town'—

Streets may be dirty, but residents love Lakewood

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of a "My Town" series reporting what residents of local communities believe is right or wrong in their neighborhoods. The series will continue to appear on Saturdays.

By BERT RESNIK
Assistant Managing Editor

The city of Lakewood is divided from the city of Long Beach by Del Amo Boulevard and a street sweeping sign.

Judging by response to "My Town," the sign is the only thing Long Beach has that Lakewood residents want.

In the 4800 block of Fidler Avenue on the Long Beach side, for example, the sign reads:

"No Parking, 8 a.m.-Noon, Friday, Street Sweeping, LBMC 3410.112."

There is no such sign in the 4900 block of Fidler Avenue on the Lakewood side, although there is regular street sweeping—or half-street sweeping.

For the sweeper, maneuvering his brushes between parked cars, campers and recreational vehicles is as challenging as the life-and-death ballet of the matador in the bullring.

Challenging, but not rewarding.

No matter the extent of his efforts, the street gets only half-swept.

For the householders who have parked their cars in driveways to leave the street clear for the sweeper, there is disgust for their offending neighbors.

Sounds exaggerated? Not according to 16 of 68 "My Town" Lakewood respondents who specified the problem. Representative quotes:

"Renters have so many cars and campers that they park on opposite side of street to where they rent. Their side stays clean, while the other side is never swept," wrote Al Kuns.

"It is some of these same people (referring to inconsiderate neighbors) who wash leaves, grass cuttings and other debris into the street and leave it there. They are the ones that never move their vehicles on street-sweeper day. I feel better since I put this on paper. —A Considerate Resident (I hope)."

"Makes neighborhood look a disgrace!" —Unsigned.

"Why can't there be signs posted prohibiting parking in the street on trash and street-sweeping days?" —Peggy Fuller.

THERE WAS A TIME when the cities of Long Beach and Lakewood had half-clean, half-dirty streets in common.

In the latter part of 1974, however, when Long Beach's Public Service Department started an expanded program of posting its city's streets, somebody new was added.

They're called parking control checkers, and they have the authority to issue $5 citations to each owner who has neglected to move his vehicle off the street during the posted hours.

The citation authorization had been in existence earlier, since 1964, but the responsibility for issuing citations belonged to the Police Department.

That department, more concerned with catching major crime offenders, had higher priorities than following the street sweeper.

Before the advent of the parking control checkers, the sweepers were "running the center of the streets more than the sides—the gutters were never clean," according to Robert E. Kennedy, director of the service department.

"Now either the street gets clean or someone gets a citation."

It's the "someone" who never gets the word. He and his parking compatriots each year contribute approximately $600,000 to a fines and forfeiture fund whose revenue principally is used for traffic control.

Kennedy expects Long Beach's posting program, which includes 40,000 signs, to be finished by June.

IF LAKEWOOD'S residents are irked by dirty streets, the irritation is not enough to cool their romance with their community.

With a few exceptions, even those who had specific complaints also had something nice to say about their neighborhood.

June Keef elaborated on a few of the advantages:

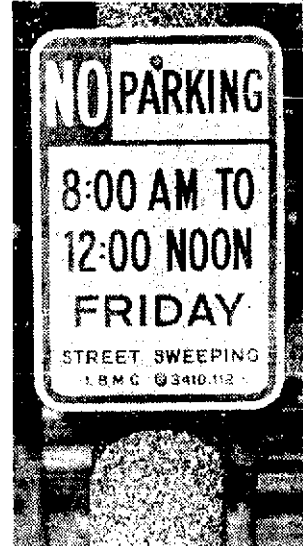

Crime rate just about the lowest in the county. Parks and Recreation Department can't be surpassed. Fine schools. Excellent library. All facilities, including parks, civic center, Lakewood Shopping Center, within walking distance or a 10-minute drive.

Good city government. A special trash pick-up twice a year in which you can dispose of things not regularly picked up.

An office of employment development and a special one for youth.

The 12th lowest city tax rate. "I know of no one who has left this area if there was any way they

$3,000, through an auction held Friday.

Nearly 100 persons were on hand for the sale, and before it was all said and done, there were 14 joyous youngsters, and one joyous old man, standing proudly by their prizes.

"I'm so happy," exclaimed 10-year-old Adriana Nichols. "I'm so glad I don't know what to do. It's always been my dream to have a real live pony and now I have one."

Five-year-old Audrey Sides, whose mother paid $105 for her pony, was nearly speechless with joy, but she managed to say shyly, "I don't know what I'm going to do with him but I hope he lets me ride him."

None of the children were more happy with their new friends than said Milt Brorby, of Torrance, who says he is at least "40 years removed from being a child."

Brorby, who is known as the "pony man," bought an old friend of his, Tommy, the jack mule.

"We've been friends for years," he remembered. "He's a wonderful animal and I came all the way from Mexico to buy him back. You see, I've owned him off and on for more than five years. I've sold him five or six times, but I always seem to get him back. I paid $500 for him the first time, and I've sold him for a lot more, but I really think it's a deal getting him for $55."

When asked what he was going to do with the mule next, his reply was to the point: "Sell him."

Sheriff: O.C. jail abuse overblown

Orange County Sheriff Brad Gates told an Assembly committee Friday in Santa Ana that complaints of prisoner mistreatment and abuse in the Orange County Jail are "horror stories" greatly exaggerated.

However, Gates sparked criticism from one legislator when he refused to let reporters accompany committee members on a tour of the jail.

He acknowledged to the Assembly Select Committee on Corrections that there were at least two cases of prisoner abuse by jailers last year that required the dismissal of two deputies.

Assemblyman Richard Alatorre, D-Los Angeles, said he will call similar hearings in San Diego, Los Angeles, Fresno and elsewhere to probe stories of abuses of prisoners.

A young man identified only as "Hal," who said he was 17 when he first "made jail," testified Friday with a red bandana on his face, bandit-style, to mask his features.

He said he was currently in protective custody but previously jailers had left him alone and had refused him a solitary cell. He said he was subsequently seized by other male inmates and raped.

"The jailers passed it off as just another thing," he said.

"Hal" was the only witness who declined to identify himself Friday, and the only one to mask his identity, as almost two dozen men and women described their experiences or told of what happened to their relatives and friends.

They detailed physical abuse, verbal harassment, sexual molesting and solitary confinement.

Many said the punishment

came from jailers for "minor infractions," such as carrying too many cigarettes or matches.

George Grey, a Santa Ana newspaperman who last year wrote a series of articles on jail conditions, told the Assembly committee that prisoner abuse in the Orange County Jail so far has brought 22 claims seeking $115 million and 28 lawsuits asking a total of $24 million in damages, in just the last two years.

Grey criticized the sheriff's academy 13-week "stress training" after which young deputies are assigned as jailers for two years of duty.

"It is the wrong kind of training for them," Grey insisted, "because the primary thrust is martial arts."

He said, "It makes jail a very dangerous place."

Two persons died last year in the Orange County Jail and both cases seemed related to the refusal of jailers to give required prescribed medication or to delays in giving medical attention, the committee was told.

Gates questioned whether the jail should handle "hard core" prisoners and called for "more staffing and facilities for alcoholics" who often wind up in his jail.

Alatorre's committee toured the jail Friday morning, but news-men were not permitted to accompany the legislators.

Alatorre's committee criticized Gates for barring the reporters and said it did not reflect well on him.

"They are responsible persons and understand the liability of invading the privacy of anyone," Alatorre said. "Barring them leads to the suspicion of what exactly is going on."

'My Town'

Streets may be dirty, but residents love Lakewood

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of a "My Town" series reporting what residents of local communities believe is right or wrong in their neighborhoods. The series will continue to appear on Saturdays.

By BERT RESNIK
Assistant Managing Editor

The city of Lakewood is divided from the city of Long Beach by Del Amo Boulevard and a street sweeping sign.

Judging by response to "My Town," the sign is the only thing Long Beach has that Lakewood residents want.

In the 4800 block of Fidler Avenue on the Long Beach side, for example, the sign reads:

"No Parking, 8 a.m.-Noon, Friday, Street Sweeping, LBMC 3410.112."

There is no such sign in the 4900 block of Fidler Avenue on the Lakewood side, although there is regular street sweeping—or half-street sweeping.

For the sweeper, maneuvering his brushes between parked cars, campers and recreational vehicles is as challenging as the life-and-death ballet of the matador in the bullring.

Challenging, but not rewarding.

No matter the extent of his efforts, the street gets only half-swept.

For the householders who have parked their cars in driveways to leave the street clear for the sweeper, there is disgust for their offending neighbors.

Sounds exaggerated?

Not according to 16 of 68 "My Town" Lakewood respondents who specified the problem. Representative quotes:

"Renters have so many cars and campers that they park on opposite side of street to where they rent. Their side stays clean, while the other side is never swept," wrote Al Kuns.

"It is some of these same people (referring to inconsiderate neighbors) who wash leaves, grass cuttings and other debris into the street and leave it there. They are the ones that never move their vehicles on street-sweeper day. I feel better since I put this on paper."

"Makes neighborhood look a disgrace"—Unsigned.

"Why can't there be signs posted prohibiting parking in the street on trash and street-sweeping days?"—Peggy Fuller.

THERE WAS A TIME when the cities of Long Beach and Lakewood had half-clean, half-dirty streets in common.

In the latter part of 1974, however, when Long Beach's Public Service Department started an expanded program of posting its city's streets, somebody new was added.

They're called parking control checkers, and they have the authority to issue $5 citations to each owner who has neglected to move his vehicle off the street during the posted hours.

The citation authorization had been in existence earlier, since 1964, but the responsibility for issuing citations belonged to the Police Department.

That department, more concerned with catching major crime offenders, had higher priorities than following the street sweeper.

Before the advent of the parking control checkers, the sweepers were "running the center of the streets more than the sides—the gutters were never clean," according to Robert E. Kennedy, director of the service department.

"Now either the street gets clean or someone gets a citation."

It's the "someone" who never gets the word. He and his parking compatriots each year contribute approximately $600,000 to a fines and forfeiture fund whose revenue principally is used for traffic control.

Kennedy expects Long Beach's posting program, which includes 40,000 signs, to be finished by June.

IF LAKEWOOD'S residents are irked by dirty streets, the irritation is not enough to cool their romance with their community.

With a few exceptions, even those who had specific complaints also had something nice to say about their neighborhood.

June Keef elaborated on a few of the advantages:

Crime rate just about the lowest in the county. Parks and Recreation Department can't be surpassed. Fine schools. Excellent library. All facilities, including parks, civic center, Lakewood Shopping Center, within walking distance or a 10-minute drive.

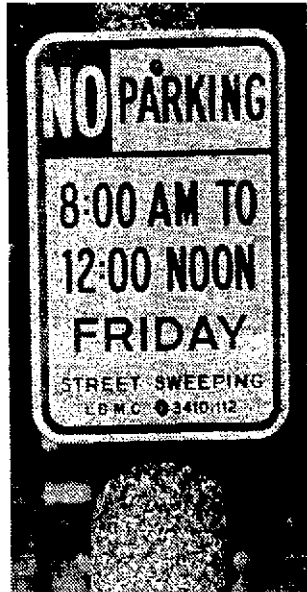

Good city government. A special trash pick-up twice a year in which you can dispose of things not regularly picked up.

An office of employment development and a special one for youth.

The 12th lowest city tax rate.

"I know of no one who has left this area if there was any way they

The replies will also be available to any interested City Council member or other governmental representatives.

In following weeks, opinions will be sought from residents of other neighborhoods served by this newspaper.

For a future "My Town" survey report, boundaries of Los Cerritos, No. 11, are Long Beach Freeway, Union Pacific Railroad, Long Beach Boulevard and Wardlow Road; Bixby, No. 12, Union Pacific Railroad, San Antonio Drive, Orange Avenue, Cherry Avenue and Bixby Road; Bixby Knolls, No. 13, San Antonio Drive, Orange Avenue, Bixby Road and Long Beach Boulevard; California Heights, No. 14, Long Beach Boulevard, Bixby Road, Cherry Avenue and Wardlow Road.

AGING LAKEWOOD SIGN, its letters falling apart, irks resident who believes its appearance contradicts the legend: "Tomorrow's City Today."

could avoid it," she wrote. "We place 'The Quality of Life' here above any aspirations for a more pretentious home anywhere else, even if we could afford it."

It is a "Quality of Life," however, that includes a number of problems for some with a less rosy view than Mrs. Keef.

The drastic increase in county taxes was one repeatedly specified.

"Doubling of taxes," wrote one woman. "We've lived here 25 years. My husband is retired. No pension, only Social Security."

Homes that are rented and not kept up, trees that are uprooting sidewalks and curbs, cars and campers parked on front lawns and loose dogs and cats were high on the list of complaints.

Several shared the opinion of Donna Pohlman, who wrote:

A petition was distributed and signed by nearly all parents in our area requesting our children attend Lakewood High School, but against our will, we are forced to send them to Jordan High School, Long Beach."

ALTHOUGH LAKEWOOD has a recall election scheduled for April 19, only a few of the letters mentioned city politics. Wrote one Fidler Avenue resident:

"The squabbling among the city officials is a disgrace to the entire city."

Wrote Lakewood Councilman Donald R. Plunkett, subject of the recall election:

"Lakewood was established by Los Angeles County administration as an excellent community of single family homes, where pride of ownership abounds, serviced by a regional and neighborhood shopping centers. A truly refreshing outlook."

"Our challenge is to maintain that activity by protecting our citizens from hyperactive changes and oppressive codes."

Some other complaints:

—Gwen C. Travis misses the yearly Christmas sleigh and buses for park outings.

—A. Garcia thinks prices are too high for young people to buy a home and a gate is needed at the South Street and Cherry Avenue railroad crossing.

—J. Westra, who lives on the 6000 block of Pearce Avenue, said there was "rat infestation in our area."

—There isn't a swimming pool at Mayfair High School.

—Mrs. A. Welkhauf said there should be an opening directly on Deebay Avenue for the 4400 block so she wouldn't have to be a "contortionist with a car."

—Marie Romero was almost a "prisoner" in her car after 4 p.m. trying to get through the bumper-to-bumper Del Amo Boulevard traffic to her home in the 2500 block on the south side of the same street.

—"Help Wanted," a student at DeMille Junior High School, felt the candy store across from the school shouldn't have been forced to open later instead of earlier, "because if the candy shop goes, so will many of our memories."

—The "Lakewood" sign on Del Amo Boulevard at the railroad tracks says "Tomorrow's City Today" and looks 20 years old.

—Apartment owners on Greenmeadow Road should be forced to keep the empty lots tidy.

IT'S CALLED "LAKEWOOD VILLAGE," but it's really part of the city of Long Beach.

Its boundaries are Lakewood Boulevard, Del Amo Boulevard, Bellflower Boulevard and Carson Street.

While its streets may be swept clean, they are being used as speedways and uprooted by trees whose roots also clog household drains.

Parking, a problem of degree in most neighborhoods, is compounded here by the proximity of Long Beach City College and its students.

That's generally what Lakewood Village respondents to "My Town" wrote.

The principal speedway is Harvey Way between Clark Avenue and Bellflower Boulevard.

It earned that race track distinction when drainage ditches were removed.

The need for more stop signs was repeatedly cited. Two street signs at Harvey Way and Heather Road should be replaced, wrote Mrs. Max R. Gaspar.

Among the 31 letters were four complaints about the Abners Five bar being, as one correspondent put it, "allowed to flourish in a respectable community."

Like their neighbors in the city of Lakewood, most villagers had something nice to say about their community even when noting a problem.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Ball wrote:

"Unlike most young couples, we did not decide to move to a new suburban tract home."

"Instead we purchased an older home in Lakewood Village and remodeled it as we found no other place that offered advantages comparable to this location."

"We enjoy the pride people take in their homes. One cannot drive down a street without seeing someone trying to improve their home as well as our community."

Wrote C. William Jensen:

"We have expressed our own feelings about living in the best part of our entire city by recently investing $40,000 in remodeling our own home."

"My home passed into my hands from my parents, who built it."

CAMPERS LEGALLY PARKED ON LAWNS BOTHER SOME better than to be able to do the same for one of my sons or daughter."

The Lawrence H. Sessions family appended:

"The Abbey Bells at Long Beach City College are absolutely great. They should be heard 24 hours per day."

"They sound like a friend in the night, and we live across the street."

LAKEWOODCOUNTRY CLUB residents, such as members of the Bill Palfy family, are generally content with their "pleasant oasis."

Within the area, bounded by Carson Street and Paramount, Del Amo and Lakewood boulevards, there are some speeding, dog, tree and early horn blowing problems.

Six months of the year, wrote Albert M. Hay, the elm trees lose their leaves on Bouton Drive. The sewer lines are ruined and "there have been plumbing trucks parked in front of most of the houses on this street at one time or another."

Dorothy M. Hiltunen doesn't like motorcycles and cars with loud mufflers going up and down on Obispo Avenue and Arbor Road.

Gerard Joseph Baird feels the green belts along Lakewood Boulevard between Arbor Road and Harvey Way should be renovated.

Sansinena threatens another life

Tanker salvage diver injured

By JANICE NELSON
Staff Writer

The Liberian tanker Sansinena that claimed five lives when she exploded in Los Angeles Harbor last December threatened the life of a salvage diver Friday.

Patrick Josephs, 29, of Portland, Oregon, was injured when oxygen bubbles from his cutting torch exploded underwater at 10:30 a.m.

He was brought up immediately, not breathing.

A Fred Devine Diving & Salvage Co. physician, fearing that Josephs would succumb to the bends from surfacing too rapidly, placed him in a hyperbaric chamber on a company barge near the tanker.

(The bends occur when a diver does not ascend to the surface slowly. Nitrogen bubbles form in the bloodstream — without treatment, a fatal condition.)

Josephs was covered with oil and also needed oxygen treatment. But with the oil contamination, the threat of fire was too great for the use of oxygen in the chamber. Battalion Chief J.D. Moore of the Los Angeles City Fire Department said.

While physicians from the Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center's Department of Emergency Medicine worked on Josephs inside the chamber, another recompression unit was brought to the scene from a nearby salvage company, and the two were mated.

This would enable the workers to move a cleaned-up Josephs from one chamber to the other without interrupting the recompression process.

As a contingency backup, a San Francisco-based C-130 Coast Guard aircraft winged south from Pacific Grove, carrying a portable recompression chamber, which could be used to transfer Josephs to a hyperbaric unit on Santa Catalina Island.

While the welders cut and fitted the link between the chambers, two doctors, sharing the 13 by 5-foot steel capsule-shaped unit with Josephs, prepared him for the move.

Dr. Richard Cales of the USC medical team said

Josephs has no broken bones but that the doctors were unsure if his symptoms were those of the bends or a result of injuries from the explosion. "But his condition is good," he said, "and he's awake and talking to us."

Watson freeze 'non-political'

Associated Press

County Assessor Philip Watson said Friday his decision to freeze residential assessments for two years in Los Angeles County wasn't a political move.

Watson denied that his decision was caused by his strained relationship with Supervisor Baxter Ward. "Nobody will believe me, but the answer is no," he said.

Supervisor Chairman Ed Edelman called Watson's moratorium a "political maneuver" which was "arbitrary, capricious and without legal foundation."

Watson said the moratorium was needed to permit a change to a county-wide assessment system to end the present "leap frog" jumps in various communities.

Watson said he believed the residential real estate market peaked in November and was now on a downward trend. He said the average price of a house dropped by $900 in December.

He said the data on the 170,000 appraisals will be used as the start of county-wide assessments, hopefully in 1979.

Watson, who will be up for re-election next year, said he expected to be around to implement the new system.

$102-million suit against IBM loses

Associated Press

A $102-million antitrust suit against IBM Corp. by an Anaheim computer firm, ended Friday with a judge directing a verdict in favor of IBM.

Los Angeles U.S. District Court Judge Ray McNichols issued his ruling after a jury had heard three months of evidence from the plaintiff, CalComp Corp.

CalComp contended that IBM had illegally lowered the prices of certain computer products in an effort to monopolize the market.

The judge said, "For some time prior to the commencement of this trial I held the view that the plaintiff had, at best, a very thin case for antitrust relief. . . I decided therefore to be most liberal in permitting the plaintiff to have the fullest opportunity to present evidence and to prove a case, if indeed one could be proved."

He concluded, "I find there is not substantial evidence in the record to support a finding of unlawful monopolization or attempt to monopolize in any of the relevant markets suggested."

Following the decision, IBM Board Chairman Frank T. Cary issued a statement contending that the lawsuit had been "a virtual replay" of another suit against the corporation by Telex.

Hahn urges cuts in use of water

From Our L.A. Bureau

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn on Friday handed down to county departments a list of suggestions aimed at conserving water and energy. Among the recommendations, he wants a "re-evaluation of automatic restroom flushing systems in county buildings."

Hahn says county vehicles should only be washed when absolutely necessary and that fountains in the Civic Center Mall should be turned on only 50 per cent of their current time.

He said the fountain outside the Hall of Administration is now on from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and that it should be on only from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

He also suggests that officials review the use of water on golf courses, parks and playgrounds and look into the possibility of putting covers on public swimming pools to prevent evaporation and retain heat.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Sunday

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You finish one phase of development, begin at mid-year to consolidate scattered, special things you learned to form a basis for further exploration. Life now takes on optimistic overtones. Relationships thrive according to how much you care. Today's natives are intrigued by light, visible energy and its uses, pursue vocations such as photography, optics, physics. Those born this year are each one of a kind, all share a strong attitude of theater.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Leave commercial concerns aside while you catch up with home life, the doings of those you love. Go over major purchases underway, current plans, future hopes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Expect little beyond usual exchanges between people who have nothing new to offer. Socializing tonight is very meaningful, gives you much to think about.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't rush around getting acquainted with newcomers. Get in touch with friends you've neglected lately. All the lively events take place after nightfall.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You're in the quiet phase of your lunar cycle, a low in motivation. An old worry comes to a prosaic end. Evening brings good news of purely personal significance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Outsiders want the experience of leadership, public attention. Let them have it. Strengthen your ties where they count.

Encourage a mood of optimism in your circle.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Discuss the local situation, find out why action can or cannot be taken, but a step to complaints. Greasy, mixed influences finally settle to a peaceful state.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Play your role in Sunday customs, then slip away for a few solitary hours. Late day join a social group where you meet individuals you'd like to know better.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Differences develop if too much is demanded of friends or they aren't free to go their ways. Your difficulty is disengaging yourself from the recent past.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get your mind off what you're doing, whether by a visit, a walk, or doing some gardening indoors or out. Tonight promise career ideas, a new job status.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Survey your home and scattered possessions. Work out some plan for renovation, extension, improvement. Communication is important; answer those letters.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your skill for mechanical or electrical operations is not enough; let experts do maintenance. Neighbors divide on issues. Go it solo until tonight's programs.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep your finger out of somebody else's pie. Be philosophical, pass the word to any who need it. Late day you've a good chance to resume an interesting contact.

Trading stamps return Merchants see values after lapse

Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Remember trading stamps, those little manifestations of the carnival spirit of the 1960s that, in the hearts of shoppers anyway, seemed about to replace the official coin of the realm?

Well, they're coming back! But, you say, you've heard that story before, almost every year in the past three or four. True. But now they're really coming back, the stamp people say because — are you prepared — you're ready for them.

Stamp people do have some expertise in this area, their survival being dependent upon how well they appeal to the instincts, desires and needs of shoppers. And they do have some evidence, although it may not yet make a case.

STILL, H. W. Greenough, president of the Trading Stamp Institute of America, proclaims: "Most areas of the country will see a return of stamps in the next year."

Some chains are signing up again. The industry's volume was up 15 per cent last year. The games, books and sets of dishes, all meant to keep you coming to the same store each week, are said to be losing their appeal.

Most important of all, discounting, the biggest competitor to stamps, is believed to be on the way out. If it isn't, say some grocery officials, the food store industry might be.

In 1968, the height of the stamp mania, $900 million worth of them were put into the hands of consumers. Seventy-two per cent of the 32,000 supermarkets were said to be stamp-givers.

IT TOOK close to two decades of growth to reach that 70 per cent level. It took only four years or so to reverse the percentages. By 1973, only 30 per cent gave stamps. Many of the others stressed discounting, or price-cutting.

Price-cutting might have seemed the most perfectly logical development then, as it does now. What greater appeal to shopper instincts than a lowered price? None, apparently, none at all.

But storekeepers found price-cutting didn't necessarily breed loyalty. Instead, shoppers scurried around to benefit from specials at various stores, and down went store profits.

"When people shopped around, the store's mix went down the drain. They bought only the specials, and it reduced gross profits by 1.5 to 3 per cent," said.

The situation became critical for many stores. Several large chains fell into precarious financial positions and some were forced into bankruptcy proceedings.

THE STAMP people were poised. Gold Bond Stamps, Greenough's company, combined stamp-saving with price-cutting, permitting customers to trade their stamps for whatever special product discount the storeowner chose.

"I don't think stamps will ever again have 70 per cent of stores," said Greenough, "but they are on the way back." His own company, one of the privately owned Carlson Cos. of Minneapolis, had a 20 per cent gain in 1976.

There were 250 to 300 stamp companies in the 1960s, some of them operated by regional and local food store chains. Most of these died off, leaving about 25 or 30 major companies in the business.

Sales of these companies last year is estimated by the stamp institute to have been about $350 million, but Greenough believes the total, somewhat obscured by private ownership, probably is more than $400 million.

HOW DO stamps do it? Some shoppers still maintain they pay for their stamps in some form or manner, Greenough disagrees. The explanation, he says, lies in higher sales.

To pay for stamps a company must increase its sales about 12 per cent, but he says, his own company hasn't produced less than a 25 per cent increase in 196 stores studied, and that the average increase is about 35 per cent.

Such increases aren't possible, he concedes, if all stores give stamps, because then nobody will have the advantage. Which is another reason why a 70 per cent penetration is not likely to be sought.

Cubic contract

SAN DIEGO — Cubic Corp.'s defense systems division has been awarded a $7.2 million contract to provide an air-to-air pilot training system called Air Combat Maneuvering Instrumentation (ACMI).

It will be the first system of its kind to be used in a foreign country — Italy — by U.S. and Italian forces.

Later the West German and British forces will utilize it.

Wage boosts this

By JACK HOUSTON
Knight News Service

What kind of a pay raise can the average jobholder expect to get this year?

Most studies made in the last six months point to between 6 and 8 per cent — or about 2 or 3 per cent above the anticipated rise in the cost of living.

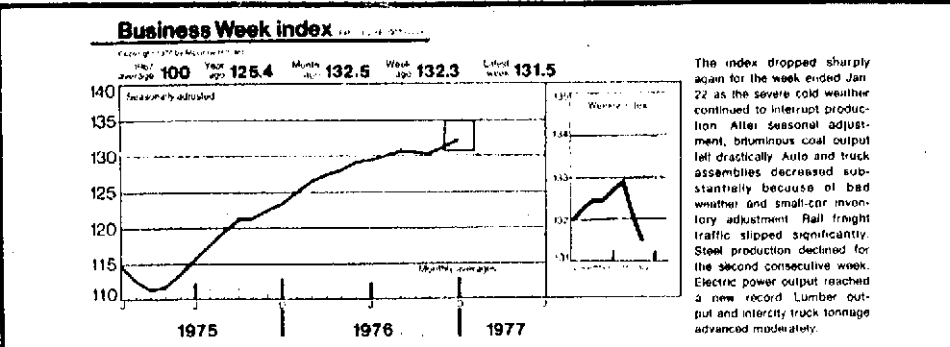

Again this year, unions are expected to step up demands for wage increases as well as cost-of-living protection and increased benefits for working women.

A forum of seven United States labor experts meeting recently under the auspices of The Conference Board of New York, a private business research group, predicted first-year wage and benefit packages for contracts involving more than 5,000 workers should rise 8 per cent this year.

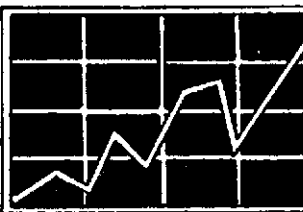

THAT'S AHEAD of the expected rise in the cost of living, which the forum placed at about 6 per cent, but it's less than wage gains by union members in recent years.

For example, a study by New York's Citibank showed wage gains for union members averaged 8.9 per cent for the first nine months of last year, after most settlements were made. Even that increase was below 1975's, when union wage gains averaged 10.2 per cent, and below 1974's 9.8 per cent, the bank said.

Pay increases for white-collar workers will average about the same. Last year, the American Compensation Association reported white-collar pay was

$35 million added to city from hotel/motel industry

The hotel/motel industry here, which served some 350,000 guests last year, contributed about $35 million to the city's total economy in 1976, a new Long Beach Convention & Visitors Bureau survey indicates.

Robert F. Lichtenhan, bureau general manager, said the guests spent slightly in excess of $10.5 million at the city's 2,200 hotels-motels. Of the overnights, about 95,000 were convention delegates.

WEIGHING the overall economic impact, Lichtenhan said that studies by the International Association of Convention & Visitors Bureaus indicates that a visitor's room expenses actually are less than 30 per cent of the sum he or she actually will spend.

Projected on that formula, the hotel-motel tariff equals $35 million spent throughout the community.

This includes meals, transportation, entertainment, department store purchases and incidentals.

Long Beach hotels and motels also collected $633,531 in room taxes last year, 16 per cent of gross revenue and paid about $81 million in other taxes to the city and county.

LOOKING to the future, Lichtenhan said the opening in January 1978 of the city's new Pacific Terrace Convention Center will provide Long Beach with one of the finest centers of its kind in the nation.

He cautioned, however, that to reach its full potential, Pacific Terrace needs an adjoining 500-room hotel that, although as yet unfulfilled, is part of the Pacific Terrace-Arena complex.

BankAmerica Corp. has reported continued steady growth in earnings for 1976. Consolidated income before securities transactions amounted to $335.9 million, up 11.4 per cent from $301.7 million in 1975.

up 8.3 per cent and predicted another 8.1 per cent increase for this year.

LAST MONTH, Hay Associates, a management consulting firm, reported similar figures. A study it made of 72 leading U.S. corporations showed they had budgeted an average 8 per cent pay increase for salaried employees.

The participating companies, which included industrial firms, banks, insurance firms, and utilities, also indicated they expected little change in the value of benefits to payroll — or a radio 1 to 3.

The Hay study indicated raises by individual companies ranged from a low of 4.5 per cent to a high of 11.6 per cent. However, half the responses were in the 7 to 8 per cent range.

Avner Porat, general manager of Hay's Chicago office, said the average annual pay increase this year should be 8.2 per cent. "This will vary from an average of 7.8 per cent for fully competent persons to 11.7 per cent for outstanding performers," he said.

MAJOR CONTRACTS covering nearly five million workers will expire this year. Labor relations are expected to be relatively peaceful, however.

The Conference Board's labor relations forum predicts the threat of work stoppages in the coal industry poses the major economic threat this year. Contracts expire next December for 120,000 coal workers, who are demanding the right to strike over local grievances.

Heated negotiations also are expected in the metals industries. The United Steelworkers of America will negotiate contracts for more than half a million workers in the aluminum, copper, basic steel, and cases industries.

Failure to reach agreement in basic steel, the forum warned, could endanger the Experimental Negotiating Agreement, a plan supported by both union and management whereby both sides agreed to submit unresolved bargaining issues to an arbitration panel.

THE FORUM ALSO said companies this year will be under growing union pressure to grant paid maternity leaves to working women and to pay medical costs associated with pregnancy.

William W. Wimpisinger, a forum member and general vice president of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, said more families have found it difficult to get by on only one income, so more women have entered the work force to help supplement family income.

"Not only will this trend continue but it will increasingly influence union-employer negotiations on such issues as day care for dependent children of working mothers, paid maternity leave for all female employees, and extension of sickness and accident benefits for maternity leaves," he said.

Kermit Washington lost as Lakers whip Denver

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

What could have been the high point in their season turned to tragedy for the Lakers Friday night when forward Kermit Washington was lost for the year with a knee injury.

The damaging blow took the luster out of a thrilling 117-109 victory over Denver which gave the Lakers the best record in the National Basketball Association, 35 wins and 19 losses.

Considering that the Lakers were a cellar team in the Pacific Division a year ago and have utilized several rookies and castoffs this season, such a splendid record is a notable achievement.

But nobody was celebrating after what happened to Washington. They know there is no replacing this hard-working forward who is one of the finest rebounders in the league.

The injury was a ruptured patellar tendon in his right knee, the same thing which knocked Wilt Chamberlain out of the Lakers' lineup for 69 games seven years ago.

Washington will undergo surgery today. There is no hope that he could return until next season.

"What a shame," said coach Jerry West. "He was just starting to make a name for himself and this happens. I feel sorrier for him than I do for the team."

Asked if this would destroy the Lakers' playoff chances, West said he had hopes that some of the other younger players would take up the slack.

The man most likely to earn more playing time, rookie Tom Abernethy, provided the key points Friday night which produced the Lakers' 21st consecutive home victory.

Abernethy scored 12 of his career-high 14 points in the fourth period to help his club withstand a last-ditch Denver rally led by Dan Issel and David Thompson.

Issel was booed lustily by the 16,954 Forum fans before the game because he was voted as the starting center in Sunday's NBA All-Star game ahead of the Lakers' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

Issel silenced his critics with 35 points and 14 rebounds. Thompson was almost as outstanding with 28 points, including 12 in the final period.

Abdul-Jabbar also enjoyed a big night with 29 points, a high total considering he missed 8 to 10 minutes by getting into early foul trouble.

Guard Lucius Allen added 22 points for the Lakers, including 16 in the first half which produced a 59-51 lead.

Abdul-Jabbar took charge in the third period, scoring 14 points, then the unheralded Abernethy

St. Anthony suffers 1st loss, 74-69

By DAVID FERRELL

Coach Larry Walker had special cause for elation when Servite High ended St. Anthony's perfect Angelus League record Friday night with a 74-69 win.

"There's been only one team in the 10 years of the league (since reorganization) to have a perfect season record, and that's been us," Walker said, jubilant over protecting the territorial claim of his 1972 squad.

More than that, Servite caught St. Anthony in the present league race at 7-1 with three games remaining. Until the Saints pulled to within two with a furious late rally, it looked easy.

Servite jumped to a 14-point first-quarter lead and sustained it well into the third period with a pressing defense and a running offense led by guard Ron Garretson.

Garretson, who finished with 25 points, scored 16 in the first half and some clutch free throws in the final minutes. But it was the tight, switching defense that put the Friars up, 41-28, at halftime.

"Defensively, we tried to do a lot of things to put St. Anthony off-balance," Walker said. "They couldn't get anything going."

It worked for a while. But late in the third quarter the Saints began breaking the press and getting passes inside to forwards Tony Spanier and Ralph Esposito.

Spanier, who hit only one of four shots in the first half for two points, brought St. Anthony back with 21 in the second half, including a basket which cut Servite's lead to 56-54 with 5:28 remaining.

He and Esposito, who scored nine of his 17 points in the second half, helped open up the Servite defense with timely outside shooting and quick fast breaks.

Servite, though, was equal to the challenge. After a cold third quarter, Garretson hit five of seven free throws down the stretch as the Friars re-established a seven-point advantage and held it the final four minutes.

Spanier pulled the Saints to within three at the 0:40 mark with his 13th point of the period, but a Garretson free throw and a full-court pass to Bob Flynn ended all

Still trail by two Vikings need two overtimes to top ELA, 112-105

By GARY RAUSCH

If Long Beach City College should somehow return to defend its state basketball championship this season, fellow coaches probably won't recognize Bill Fraser.

By March the Viking coach will sport a head of completely gray hair. He added a listful Friday night as his beleaguered troops rallied for a 112-105 victory in two overtimes at East Los Angeles.

Unfortunately for Fraser and the Vikings, Metropolitan Conference leader Bakersfield also won, leaving LBCC still two games behind with four to play.

About the only thing reminiscent of the Vikings' earlier decision of the Huskies (70-67) was the rough play. Much of that Friday was precipitated by two of the weakest officials this side of an intramural league.

Forty-two fouls were whistled and nearly that many went undetected. Had the outcome been reversed, Fraser might have complained.

"I can't say anything after a win, even one in double overtime," he beamed afterward. "What turned it around tonight was our full-court press . . . that, and James Hughes and Gary Mulder."

Hughes, who scored just one point in his Viking debut Tuesday, poured in 27, missing only seven of 19 shots — one a flying slam dunk. Mulder tossed in 15 markers, nine of them at the free throw line and was a ball-hawking demon.

LBCC had frittered away an early five-point lead. Down by seven, the Vikings closed to within a point once, let it slide to 10; narrowed that to three and promptly missed five successive shots that allowed ELA an 11-point bulge (75-64) with 7:58 remaining.

At that point in the second half, the Vikings connected on only 12 of 28 shots, the Huskies 14 of 22. Fraser called timeout and went to his strangling press.

Four ELA turnovers later, the margin was 81-77. David Oliver scored the last of his 20 points and Mulder fouled out Brian DeRousseau before adding the tying points (81-81) on two free throws.

Hughes and Mulder combined for the next 11 points, the latter tipping in an Oliver miss in the final three seconds for a 92-92 knot.

Hughes drove the key to give LBCC the lead for keeps (94-92) 47 seconds into the first extra session.

At last! Tully clears 18-1/2 in Toronto

TORONTO (Special)—UCLA pole vaulter Mike Tully, competing for the Pacific Coast Club of Long Beach, achieved a long-awaited pinnacle Friday night by clearing the 18-foot mark for the first time in his career at the Toronto Star-Maple Leaf Games.

Tully, who prepped at Millikan High, soared 18-1/2 to win the event, then made three unsuccessful attempts at the indoor record of 18-3/4.

Francie Larrieu-Lutz, also of the PCC, won the women's 1,500 meters in 4:12.0, finishing more than 50 meters ahead of runnerup Jan Merrill.

Rik Massengale's 'off' round still tops Hope

PALM SPRINGS — If the form chart holds up, Rik Massengale will lead all the way and win the $200,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic.

The 30-year-old Texan has a history of breaking on top and staying there, which is exactly what he has done in this tournament thus far. He remained four shots ahead Friday despite his worst round of the week, a 2-under-par 70 at Bermuda Dunes.

Massengale led wire-to-wire at Tallahassee in 1975 and duplicated the effort in 1976 at Hartford, where he started with a pair of 65s and posted the lowest 72-hole total of the year, 266.

"I'm a good frontrunner," Massengale admitted after his pedestrian round in which he stroked the ball flawlessly but couldn't get any putts to drop.

He made 16 pars and two birdies, sinking an 18-footer and a 6-footer. He hit all 18 greens in regulation and has missed only one in 54 holes.

Bruce Lietzke, the hottest player on the tour this season, shot the same score on the same course, leaving him at 12-under-par 200. He likes that position, saying he much prefers to come off the pace.

Massengale's rounds of 64 at Indian Wells, 66 at Tamarisk and 70 at Bermuda Dunes add up to 16-under-par 200, well within reach of the tournament record of 22-under held by Arnold Palmer.

Palmer, a five-time winner here, carded a 69 Friday and trails by 10. In his heyday, Arnie might Massengale and Lietzke play La Quinta today, the most demanding of the four courses used in this tournament. So does Hubert Green, the 1974 winner, who moved to within six strokes of the lead with a 69 at Bermuda.

Gay Brewer, 44, shot into contention with a 66 at Indian Wells, five behind Massengale and one in front of Green.

Massengale, who credits his success in recent years to his newfound Christianity, said he was not surprised that his lead remained the same after a "mediocre" round.

"Bermuda Dunes played very long today and the greens were difficult to read," he said. "I had all kinds of makeable birdie putts, but I couldn't get them close to the hole."

Lietzke said the same thing. Still, his 70 ran his streak of par-or-under rounds to 19 this year and 24 over a two-year span. He had three birdies, one bogey.

Former St. Anthony star leads visitors 49ers seek to pad PCAA cage lead, tackle Pacific

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

Long Beach State's basketball team, revitalized by Thursday's pounding of San Jose State, returns to its Pacific Coast Athletic Association title chase tonight.

The first-place 49ers, who hold a half-game lead over San Diego State, entertain the University of Pacific in an 8 o'clock encounter in the Long Beach Arena.

The Tigers are 3-4 in league, the 49ers 6-2. Pacific, led by former St. Anthony High standout Terence Carney, has won three games in a row. The Tigers began the streak nine nights ago by stinging Long Beach, 73-69.

The 49ers then lost at San Jose and began the week in serious condition with a two-game losing skid and a case of extreme self-doubt.

That was dramatically cured by Thursday's 101-69 pasting of San Jose.

Although the effort sent the 49ers over the century mark for the third time this season, coach Dwight Jones and his athletes felt it was defense, not offense, that led to the team's most impressive performance of the season.

"During our losing streak we didn't play defense," says Tony McGee, who came off the bench to play effectively in the lopsided triumph.

"When we play hard on defense, our offense comes together."

"It's our defense that makes the offense go," agreed Donnie Martin.

Jones makes it unanimous.

The 49ers were in a 1-2-2 zone for an extensive period of time Thursday for the first time in league competition.

"But you'll be seeing a lot more of it," Jones said of a traditional 49er defense.

He sent his team into the zone with the score tied at 21— and San Jose got only 48 points in the final 30 minutes of the game.

Long Beach scored 80 in the

For much of the season, to keep opponents from holding the ball against his high-speed 49ers, Jones has used a man-to-man defense.

Thursday's explosion was a strong vote for the zone.

"We're going to use it whenever we can," said Jones.

TORONTO (Special)—UCLA pole vaulter Mike Tully, competing for the Pacific Coast Club of Long Beach, achieved a long-awaited pinnacle Friday night by clearing the 18-foot mark for the first time in his career at the Toronto Star-Maple Leaf Games.

Tully, who prepped at Millikan High, soared 18-1/2 to win the event, then made three unsuccessful attempts at the indoor record of 18-3/4.

Francie Larrieu-Lutz, also of the PCC, won the women's 1,500 meters in 4:12.0, finishing more than 50 meters ahead of runnerup Jan Merrill.

Former St. Anthony star leads visitors 49ers seek to pad PCAA cage lead, tackle Pacific

Long Beach State's basketball team, revitalized by Thursday's pounding of San Jose State, returns to its Pacific Coast Athletic Association title chase tonight.

The first-place 49ers, who hold a half-game lead over San Diego State, entertain the University of Pacific in an 8 o'clock encounter in the Long Beach Arena.

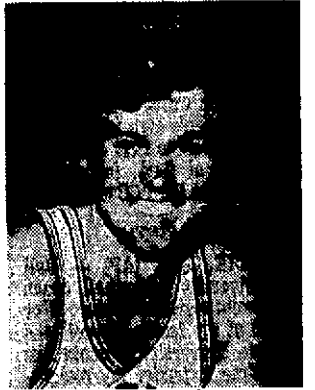

The Tigers are 3-4 in league, the 49ers 6-2. Pacific, led by former St. Anthony High standout Terence Carney, has won three games in a row. The Tigers began the streak nine nights ago by slinging Long Beach, 73-69.

The 49ers then lost at San Jose and began the week in serious condition with a two-game losing skid and a case of extreme self-doubt.

That was dramatically cured by Thursday's 101-69 pasting of San Jose.

Although the effort sent the 49ers over the century mark for the third time this season, coach Dwight Jones and his athletes felt it was defense, not offense, that led to the team's most impressive performance of the season.

"During our losing streak we didn't play defense," says Tony of it," Jones said of a traditional 49er defense.

same span, many coming on fast-break baskets.

"The zone opened our running game," said Jones. "Once we got our fast break going it was blitz time and we really broke the game open."

For much of the season, to keep opponents from holding the ball against his high-speed 49ers, Jones has used a man-to-man defense.

Thursday's explosion was a strong vote for the zone.

"We're going to use it whenever we can," said Jones.

lot of things to put St. Anthony off-balance," Walker said. "They couldn't get anything going."

It worked for a while. But late in the third quarter the Saints began breaking the press and getting passes inside to forwards Tony Spanier and Ralph Esposito.

Spanier, who hit only one of four shots in the first half for two points, brought St. Anthony back with 21 in the second half, including a basket which cut Servite's lead to 56-54 with 5:28 remaining.

He and Esposito, who scored nine of his 17 points in the second half, helped open up the Servite defense with timely outside shooting and quick fast breaks.

Servite, though, was equal to the challenge. After a cold third quarter, Garretson hit five of seven free throws down the stretch as the Friars re-established a seven-point advantage and held it the final four minutes.

Spanier pulled the Saints to within three at the 0:40 mark with his 13th point of the period, but a Garretson free throw and a full-court pass to Bob Flynn ended all

Oliveros wins Woolf jockey award

Frank Oliveros, runner-up in the voting last year, won the 1977 edition of the George Woolf Memorial Jockey Award Friday at Santa Anita Park.

Oliveros, 27, beat out four rivals, including the first woman ever nominated, Robyn Smith.

Through last Sunday Oliveros had ridden 533 winners and his mounts had earned $5,411,544. In 1975, he rode Cruiser II to victory in the Del Mar Invitational and he had another $100,000 race winner in 1976 with Fleet Dragon in the 1976 Hollywood Juvenile.

Oliveros joins such riding stars as Johnny Longden, Bill Shoemaker, Eddie Arcaro, Johnny Adams, Laffit Pincay Jr. and Sandy Hawley who have won the award named for the late George Woolf, whose riding victories included the inaugural of the Santa Anita Handicap with Azucar in 1935.

Oliveros will receive the award during Sunday's program when the $115,300 La Canada Stakes will be run.

Hail Hilarious is the probable favorite in the 1 1/4-mile La Canada and will carry top weight of 121 pounds against eight rivals.

Hail Hilarious has won two stakes at Santa Anita after returning to action following a foot injury at Keeneland last fall.

But Hail Hilarious must give three pounds to Sweet Robbery and Pacific Princess, with most of the others carrying 115.

Expected to be a top contender in the La Canada is English-bred Woodsome, heroine of the El Encino Stakes on Jan.

19. A stakes winner in England two seasons ago, Woodsome will carry 115 with apprentice Mark Sellers in the irons.

In post position order, the entries are Lucie Manet with Shoemaker, 115; Sweet Robbery, Fernando Toro, 118; Hail Hilarious, Donald Pierce, 121; Snowy Cape, Oliveros, 115; Woodsome, Sellers, 115; Up to Juliet, Pincay, 115; Madam Gaylady, Marco Castaneda, 116; Granjo Sueno, Danny Velasquez, 116, and Pacific Princess, Darrel McHargue, 118.

FRIDAY AT Santa Anita, King Pelli-nore, tuning up for the Feb. 20 $100,000 San Antonio Stakes, scored a half-length victory over Duveen in the $30,000 feature race.

Shoemaker took favored King Pelli-nore to the outside in the stretch and the winner of last year's $350,000 Champions responded by catching and then outrunning Duveen to the wire.

Kingellinore, who led early but lost the lead to Duveen midway through the 1 1/4-mile turf event, was clocked in 1:46 1/2. He returned $3.80, $2.60 and $2.40.

Duveen, with Pincay aboard, returned $3 and $2.80 in the race for older horses which drew just five contestants. The show payoff on Silver Saber was $3.

Toro scored a consecutive riding triple in the three races leading up to Friday's feature, with a $6.40 triumph aboard The Pop in the fifth, a $10.60 victory aboard Oh My Goodness in the sixth, and a $19.60 upset on Sassy Gaelic in the seventh.

Loyola ace has one miss—at L.B.

Loyola Marymount junior center Eric Claus has some bad memories of the Long Beach Arena, the site of the Lions' game against No. 1-ranked USF Tuesday night.

It was in the Long Beach Arena that Claus missed his only free throw attempt of the season. It came in the first half of the Loyola-Long Beach State game on Dec. 28 in the International City Classic.

Since that miss, which came on the heels of 12 successes, Claus has made 25 successive free throws. He is shooting .974 from the line this season, hitting the bullseye on 37 of 38.

"I just plain missed it," Claus said of the errant shot that has cost him a perfect season at the 15-foot stripe. "I was short on it and pulled it some to the left. I have no excuses — but I sure would like to have it back."

Claus' proficiency at the free throw line is only one phase of the 6-8 junior's shooting excellence. He set a school field goal percentage record last season (.574) and has hit 52.2 per cent of his attempts this season. In his freshman year he made 10 of 12 fielders in limited playing time.

"Shooting is all technique and concentration," he said. "Confidence is also a big key. Once you get into that groove, things become much easier. At least they do mentally."

Claus is the leading scorer for the Lions, averaging 12.7 points. He had a high game of 22 when his club lost a 79-72 decision at Santa Clara.

He will be matched against USF's mammoth 7-foot center Bill Cartwright in Tuesday night's game.

In the first meeting between the two this season, Claus scored 18 points. Cartwright had 22.

"He's a good player," Claus said of Cartwright. "He's much improved over last year. He's so much bigger than he was a year ago. He's probably the same height, but he's put on quite a few pounds, and now he's very effective underneath."

Ye Old Rams take liking to Youngblood

Jack Youngblood just about made it a clean sweep when he was again chosen the most valuable player and the top defensive lineman for the Rams in an announcement Saturday by president George Strugar of Ye Old Rams, a group of former players who annually vote awards.

Youngblood won both awards last year and in 1973 he was tabbed the best defensive lineman.

Youngblood also was first-string all-pro for 1976 by The Associated Press, Professional Football Writers of America, United Press International, and defensive player of the year by Kansas City's 101 committee.

Selected as the top running back for the fourth year was Lawrence McCutcheon, who set a team rushing record by gaining 1,168 yards.

Wide receiver laurels went to Ron Jessie for the second consecutive season, while defensive back honors were won by Monte Jackson.

Rich Saul, a Pro Bowl center in his second season as a starter, was voted offensive lineman, while quarterback Pat Haden succeeded Jackson as rookie of the year.

Moyer four-hits Pierce; Cerritos in Stengel finals

Freshman pitcher Greg Moyer made his debut for Cerritos College a good one Friday, hurling a four-hit shutout as the Falcons defeated Pierce, 6-0, in the semifinals of the Casey Stengel Tournament at Cerritos.

Moyer struck out six and did not allow a runner past second base. He received all the support he needed in the first inning when shortstop Ron Wilkenson reached base on an error, then stole second, third and home. Designated hitter Dennis Curry slapped a two-run single in the seventh inning.

Cerritos plays for the tournament championship today at 2:30 against either Rio Hondo or Hancock. The teams were deadlocked after 14 innings Friday and will resume their game today at 9:30 a.m.

Kings tackle Pittsburgh tonight Dionne making keen bid for individual points title

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

Where would the Kings be this season without Marcel Dionne and Rogie Vachon?

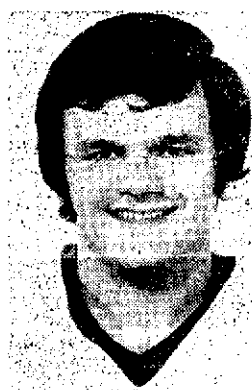

Battling to hang onto the third and final playoff position in the NHL's Norris Division, it's show-down time again tonight for coach Bob Pulford's skaters when they encounter the Pittsburgh Penguins at the Forum. A crowd of 12,500 is expected for the 8:05 faceoff.

Dionne, who reached the 500-point mark in the second-fewest number of games in NHL history, is the latest player of a post-1967 team to make a run for the individual points championship.

Dionne, with 32 goals and 49 assists for 81 points, trails Montreal's league-leading Guy Lafleur by five points (39 goals, 47 assists).

No player of a post-1967 team has won the Art Ross Trophy, the only individual award won each season by a pre-1967 skater, and only three players of post 1967 teams have finished in the top three.

Dionne is one of them, placing third behind Bobby Orr and Phil Esposito of Boston in 1974-75. Bobby Clarke of Philadelphia was second in 1972-73 and again last season and Gil Perreault of Buffalo was third last season.

MARCEL DIONNE
Eyes points crown

When Orr and Esposito had a monopoly on the scoring title for six seasons, ending last year when Lafleur won the award, Dionne was the only player other than the two Bruins to lead the scoring parade in one of the half-season portions. That was two seasons ago when he led the second half.

The 25-year-old Dionne began his career as a center with Detroit and came to the Kings before the start of last season. He was moved to right wing by Team Canada coach Scotty Bowman during last September's Canada Cup series and has played there most of this season.

That means that should Dionne or Lafleur win the scoring title this season, it will be two in a row for right wingers, none of whom had won before Lafleur did last season since 1962-63 when Gordie Howe of Detroit was the winner.

Dionne earlier this season scored his 500th regular-season point. It came in his 418th game, meaning that only Orr scored that many points in fewer games than Dionne. Orr's 500th point was in his 396th game. Jean Beliveau, Montreal's former center standout, reached the 500-point mark in his 424th game, which had been the second-fewest games until Dionne reached the milestone last Dec. 4.

Vachon carries a 19-18-9 record and 2.94 goals against average into tonight's game which opens a six-game Forum stand for the Kings. The acrobatic goaltender has started all but nine games this season and the Kings have not won without him. Gary Edwards was 0-6-2 while Gary Simmons lost his only start on Wednesday.

Lifetime, Vachon is 23-14-3 against Pittsburgh which is entrenched one rung above the Kings. However, the Kings have beaten the Penguins twice in three meetings this season.

Ex-King Mike Corrigan has notched 11 goals and 19 assists for 30 points.

Keele newest addition to LBSU football staff

Tom Keele, a coaching veteran with nearly 20 years experience, has been hired as an assistant football coach at Long Beach State.

A graduate of the University of Oregon where he played on the Ducks' 1958 Rose Bowl team, Keele has coached at the University of Oregon, San Jose State, Hawaii and Washington State. He was with British Columbia of the Canadian Football league last season.

Keele will serve as offensive coordinator for the 49ers.

"Tom's exceptional background makes him a key addition to our staff," said head coach Dave Currey. "His innovative mind and knowledge of the pro offense makes him an outstanding coach. He has been a coach for nearly 20 years, yet retains the enthusiasm of a rookie."

Keele is the fourth assistant hired by Currey, who replaced Wayne Howard in December.

Stars to take part in cage benefit

Television stars Lee Majors and Gabe Kaplan are among the Hollywood celebrities who will participate in a benefit basketball doubleheader Sunday at the Long Beach Arena.

The two games, at 4 and 6 p.m., will feature The Miracles vs. Soul Train All-Stars, and the Teenage Superstars vs. Welcome Back Kotter.

Other celebrities include Marvin Gaye, Robby Benson, Richard Pryor and former UCLA basketball star Mike Warren.

Proceeds will be donated to the All-American Foundation for Mentally Retarded Children.

Tickets, priced at $4.50, $3.50 and $2.50, can be purchased at the Long Beach Arena box office or at all Ticketon agencies.

Ashe sidelined

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Former Wimbledon champion Arthur Ashe, billed as the main attraction in the $100,000 La Costa International Tennis Classic, is not going to make the event. Ashe was operated on Wednesday for removal of calcium and a portion of the heel bone of his left foot. He said his recuperation is going well.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Shortstop Garry Templeton has agreed to salary terms for the 1977 season with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Finals tonight at Lakewood Millikan has hold on Moore wrestling title

Millikan High, in the midst of its best wrestling season in the school's history, figures to have little trouble winning the Moore League finals tonight at Lakewood.

The Rams, who were undefeated in 13 dual matches, beat their four Moore opponents by an average of 39 points. A win tonight would give Millikan its sixth successive league championship.

Prelims start at 11 a.m. Meet manager Dennis Lyman says the finals should begin around 5 p.m.

First two athletes in each of the 13 weight classifications qualify for one of four CIF sectional tournaments next Saturday at Edgewood High. CIF finals are Feb. 26 at Fountain Valley.

49ERS HOST PACIFIC—

"We've had trouble running out of the 'man' defense because you never know where your players are going to be when a shot is taken.

"Your point guard may be under the basket, so it's difficult to get organized," explained Jones. "But in the zone, everyone has a defensive spot and you know where they should be when a shot is taken. That makes it easy to run, if you get the rebound."

The 49ers did that against San Jose, outrebounding the visitors, 53-28.

It will be an important area tonight, too. Pacific was even with the 49ers in that department last week.

The Tigers were impressive in beating Fresno Thursday, getting 18 points from Mike Peet and Myron Jordan, 16 from Vic Baker and eight from Carney. All played well against Long Beach last week. The fifth Tiger starter is 6-8 George Fowler.

Jones will go with his regulars, Dale Dillon, Richard Johnson, Clarence Ruffen, Larry Hudson and Lloyd McMillan, but, influenced by the 63 points he got from his reserves Thursday, will substitute quickly.

Interestingly, and perhaps significantly, Jones used 14 players in his win; Pacific used seven in its triumph.

Leptospermums must be pruned to be attractive

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Australian Tea Plants (not beverage tea) Leptospermums grow in a highly pigged manner, if they are not pruned from the very first year the plants are set out in the garden.

They are attractive plants with very small leaves. The blossoms, whether single or double, ruby red, bright pink, or white, bloom from winter into spring. Prune them annually for best attractive shape, which in turn produces more new growth followed by masses of more flowers.

Leptospermum like sun and should not be planted near a lawn where the plants soil is kept constantly moist.

FERTILIZE annuals and perennials that still haven't set their flower buds and protect them from aphids. Plant sun loving annuals to flower in late spring. Iceland Poppies and calendula grow the fastest and bloom the soonest of any other annuals planted now. Snapdragons provide the showiest and warmest (brightest) colors.

Plant the youngest plants from the pony packs — the oldest, tallest ones with blooms on them won't grow as tall. Select the smallest size stock. Be sure pansies and violas lowest growth on the plants aren't covered by any soil whatsoever. Those plants if buried a little deep might eventually turn limp.

The new plants are pruned after they have finished blooming. Cut back one-third of the upright branches and one-fourth of the outward spreading ones. Thereafter, the plants branches each year after blooming are cut back one-third only of the previous year's growth, and one-fourth of the outward spreading branches. Annual pruning thus forces plants to grow shapely, attractive, and most important of all, with masses of many more flowering branches!

IT'S TIME to make a trip to the nursery and buy those bare root fruit trees, bare root shade trees, bare root roses or grapes, bare root strawberries, canberries, asparagus, rhubarb, or artichoke roots. Buy them right away and get them into the ground. Later in the spring season you'll be glad you did. The cost of those same plants could be as much as 30 percent more, because they'll be planted and growing in containers.

CHECK those dahlia roots that are stored in a box of sand, or sawdust, peat moss, or wrapped up in several folds of newspapers. Sprinkle the roots if they appear as though they're shrivelling or moisten the medium in which they are stored. Later next month they'll be ready to set out in the ground.

DON'T GIVE up on carnations if they grew more like vines. Cut the branches back to within five inches of the ground.

Don't apply any manure dressing around the plants. Spread a thin layer of organic top dressing over the soil, also scatter some flower-fruit maker fertilizer around the plants and just lightly chop into the soil to make the fertilizer stay put. The soil must be watered well in advance of top dressing and feeding.

GARDENING

How do your cucumbers grow — ?

Most varieties of cucumbers have branching vines that will reach 4 to 8 ft. in length by mid-summer. They take up a lot of space unless trained up frames, fences, or trellises made of poles. A slanting frame such as this, covered with galvanized hog wire, allows the heavy cucumbers to hang down on the inside where they can be easily reached and picked.

Seed breeders have introduced compact-vine hybrid cucumbers in recent years, some with vines that will not grow beyond a 2 1/2 ft. circle. These are best suited to small gardens or containers. In larger gardens, the more vigorous, wide spreading hybrids will bear more fruit over a longer period.

Regardless of which you plant, cucumbers will pay off because of the amount you can harvest from a given area.

Cucumbers come in "slicing" or "pickling" types. You can pickle either type. The difference is that pickling cucumbers are short and blocky for packing whole. The fruits of slicers are long and have to be quartered or sliced for pickling.

Perhaps more with cucumbers than with any other vegetable, it is important to plant modern hybrids that are resistant to crippling plant diseases such as mildew and mosaic virus. The very newest hybrids are gynoecious and have a high proportion of female blossoms that can develop into fruit. They can yield prodigious crops.

Take a Nasturtium to lunch

Few people can say the word "nasturtium" with smiling because it is such an endearing little flower. Long stemmed, faintly fragrant, brilliantly colorful, nasturtiums rank number four in popularity polls. Perhaps, if more gardeners knew that nasturtiums really are good to eat, they would rate even higher.

Nasturtiums are members of the same plant family as a number of leafy vegetables including cress and mustard greens.

Buds and flowers are tender and piquant, perfectly safe to eat in salads.

If eating nasturtiums doesn't appeal to you, then grow them to arrange, wear in lapels, or enjoy in the landscape. White, red, cherry, orange, mahogany, gold and yellow separate colors and excellent color mixtures are available from seed displays; mail order catalogs also offer varieties with variegated foliage or extra dwarf plants.

Nasturtiums are customarily spring-planted in warm soil. The seeds are very large and sprout rapidly; blooms appear with 45 to 50 days.

Leptospermums must be pruned to be attractive

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Australian Tea Plants (not beverage tea) Leptospermums grow in a highly pigged manner, if they are not pruned from the very first year the plants are set out in the garden.

They are attractive plants with very small leaves. The blossoms whether single or double, ruby red, bright-pink, or white, bloom from winter into spring. Prune them annually for best attractive shape, which in turn produces more new growth followed by masses of more flowers. Leptospermum like sun and should not be planted near a lawn where the plants soil is kept constantly moist.

FERTILIZE annuals and perennials that still haven't set their flower buds and protect them from aphids. Plant sun loving annuals to flower in late spring. Iceland Poppies and calendula grow the fastest and bloom the soonest of any other annuals planted now. Snapdragons provide the showiest and warmest (brightest) colors.

Plant the youngest plants from the pony packs — the oldest, tallest ones with blooms on them won't grow as tall. Select the smallest size stock. Be sure pansies and violas lowest growth on the plants aren't covered by any soil whatsoever. Those plants if buried a little deep might eventually turn limp.

The new plants are pruned after they have finished blooming. Cut back one-third of the upright branches and one-fourth of the outward spreading ones. Thereafter, the plants branches each year after blooming are cut back one-third only of the previous year's growth, and one-fourth of the outward spreading branches. Annual pruning thusly forces plants to grow shapely, attractive, and most important of all, with masses of many more flowering branches!

IT'S TIME to make a trip to the nursery and buy those bare root fruit trees, bare root shade trees, bare root roses or grapes, bare root strawberries, caneberries, asparagus, rhubarb, or artichoke roots. Buy them right away and get them into the ground. Later in the spring season you'll be glad you did. The cost of those same plants could be as much as 30 percent more, because they'll be planted and growing in containers.

CHECK those dahlia roots that are stored in a box of sand, or sawdust, peat moss, or wrapped up in several folds of newspapers. Sprinkle the roots if they appear as though they're shrivelling or moisten the medium in which they are stored. Later next month they'll be ready to set out in the ground.

DON'T GIVE up on carnations if they grew more like vines. Cut the branches back to within five inches of the ground.

Don't apply any manure dressing around the plants. Spread a thin layer of organic top dressing over the soil, also scatter some flower-fruit maker fertilizer around the plants and just lightly chop into the soil to make the fertilizer stay put. The soil must be watered well in advance of top dressing and feeding.

GARDENING

How do your cucumbers grow — ?

Most varieties of cucumbers have branching vines that will reach 4 to 8 ft. in length by mid-summer. They take up a lot of space unless trained up frames, fences, or tepees made of poles. A slanting frame such as this, covered with galvanized hog wire, allows the heavy cucumbers to hang down on the inside where they can be easily reached and picked.

Seed breeders have introduced compact-vine hybrid cucumbers in recent years, some with vines that will not grow beyond a 2 1/2 ft. circle. These are best suited to small gardens or containers. In larger gardens, the more vigorous, wide spreading hybrids will bear more fruit over a longer period.

Regardless of which you plant, cucumbers will pay off because of the amount you can harvest from a given area.

Cucumbers come in "slicing" or "pickling" types. You can pickle either type. The difference is that pickling cucumbers are short and blocky for packing whole. The fruits of slicers are long and have to be quartered or sliced for pickling.

Perhaps more with cucumbers than with any other vegetable, it is important to plant modern hybrids that are resistant to crippling plant diseases such as mildew and mosaic virus. The very newest hybrids are gynoecious and have a high proportion of female blossoms that can develop into fruit. They can yield prodigious crops.

Take a Nasturtium to lunch

Few people can say the word "nasturtium" with smiling because it is such an endearing little flower. Long stemmed, faintly fragrant, brilliantly colorful, nasturtiums rank number four in popularity polls. Perhaps, if more gardeners knew that nasturtiums really are good to eat, they would rate even higher.

Nasturtiums are members of the same plant family as a number of leafy vegetables including cress and mustard greens.

Buds and flowers are tender and piquant, perfectly safe to eat in salads.

Violet Society

The Long Beach African Violet Society will meet on Tuesday at 11:30 a.m. at the Conventan Presbyterian Church, Third Street and Atlantic Avenue. A violet culture talk will be given and plants and supplies will be for sale.

Members and guests are asked to bring their own lunch to eat prior to the noon meeting. Coffee and tea will be provided. Visitors are welcome to join the group and learn how to grow their violets more beautifully.

Succulent Society

The South Coast Cactus and Succulent Society plans a meeting Sunday at 1:30 p.m. at the South Coast Botanic Garden, 26300 Crenshaw Blvd., Palos Verdes Peninsula.

Jonniene Alvarez will show slides of her and her husband's flowering cacti and succulents during the program. An informal plant sale will be on display for members only; refreshments will be served. The public is invited to attend.

If eating nasturtiums doesn't appeal to you, then grow them to arrange, wear in lapels, or enjoy in the landscape. White, red, cherry, orange, mahogany, gold and yellow separate colors and excellent color mixtures are available from seed displays; mail order catalogs also offer varieties with variegated foliage or extra dwarf plants.

Nasturtiums are customarily spring-planted in warm soil. The seeds are very large and sprout rapidly; blooms appear with 45 to 50 days.

The De La Pena jury was excused from Thursday afternoon until Monday morning, when his defense will be presented. Any testimony about statements made by one defendant which may implicate the other, is heard only by the first defendant's jury.

Ruiz, whose testimony in Spanish was translated by an interpreter, told the jury he came with De La Pena to the U.S. nine days before the shooting because De La Pena told him he would find him a job.

Ruiz said De La Pena paid Ruiz's air fare from Anahuac to Tijuana and then paid a "coyote" to smuggle both defendants into California. Coyote is a term used to describe a person who helps aliens enter the country illegally.

Alien says he lied about murder plot

By AL MURRELL
Staff Writer

One of two illegal aliens on trial for murder in connection with the revenge slaying of a Long Beach man testified Friday he did not know his co-defendant intended to kill anyone.

Angel Ruiz, 19, of Anahuac, Chihuahua, Mexico, took the stand in his own defense in Long Beach Superior Court and said he lied to investigators about his involvement in a murder plot because he was scared of them.

Ruiz and Leonel De La Pena, 22, also of Anahuac, are being tried by separate juries in the murder of Pablo Monarres Aguirre, 40, of 271 E. 67th Way.

Ruiz testified Friday that he saw De La Pena gun down Aguirre in front of the La Chapala Inn, 6727 Long Beach Blvd., last Sept. 12.

The De La Pena jury was excused from Thursday afternoon until Monday morning, when his defense will be presented.

Any testimony about statements made by one defendant which may implicate the other, is heard only by the first defendant's jury.

Ruiz, whose testimony in Spanish was translated by an interpreter, told the jury he came with De La Pena to the U.S. nine days before the shooting because De La Pena told him he would find him a job.

Ruiz said De La Pena paid Ruiz's air fare from Anahuac to Tijuana and then paid a "coyote" to smuggle both defendants into California. Coyote is a term used to describe a person who helps aliens enter the country illegally.

Under cross-examination by Dep. Dist. Atty. Jack Hourigan, Ruiz said he lied about having prior knowledge of De La Pena's plan to kill Aguirre when he was interrogated following his arrest. "He told me he was going to talk with him..." Ruiz testified.

The defendant said he lied to the investigators because he was scared of police and of his own situation. "I was frightened because they were using a lot of dirty words and talking about jail," he said.

'Missing' 10-year-old was at friend's home

Kendra K. Grimm, a 10-year-old Long Beach girl who was the subject of an all-night search by police after she was reported missing from her home Thursday afternoon, was found safe Friday at the home of a friend.

Police said the child had been reported missing by her mother, Sandra Hubbard, of 1934 E. Fourth St., after the girl failed to return home from school Thursday.

Following the all-night search, she was located early Friday at the home of Marsha Raynor, 1126 E. Fifth St.

The girl's mother told police she believed her daughter might have gone to the Raynor house but the mother did not have the street address and knew only Mrs. Raynor's business telephone number.

Missile seeks out 'target'

PT. MUGU (AP) — The Tomahawk cruise missile, being tested for its ability to seek out and destroy enemy ships, carried out its second simulated attack Friday on a target ship hidden over the horizon, a Navy spokesman said.

The pilotless, 18-foot-long missile was launched from the wing of a Navy jet and flew a total of 437 miles over the Pacific Missile Test Range, guided by a sophisticated radar system.

After locating and flying over the target ship at low level to simulate an attack, the Tomahawk flew to a recovery area, where it dropped from the sky on parachutes and was picked up.

The cruise missile, which is also being tested in a version for attacking targets on land, is a key weapon of national defense.

Smaller big Chevys bow for 1977

The all-new Impala and Caprice, Chevrolet's redesigned full-size cars, highlight the division's lineup for 1977.

The '77 Impala and Caprice sedans are close to 700 pounds lighter than the '76 models. Wheelbase has been sliced 5.5 inches; overall length, 10.6 inches, and width, 4 inches. Height has been increased about 2.5 inches.

The standard-size cars feature completely redesigned bodies and chassis. The 250-cubic-inch six-cylinder engine replaces the 350 V-8 as the base powerplant in the B-body sedans. The 400 and 454-V-8s have been discontinued.

Chevrolet said its big cars in 1977 offer improved ride, handling and fuel economy with little or no loss of interior space, comfort and cargo capacity. Full-size hardtops have been eliminated.

Changes in the division's small and intermediate lines have been restricted primarily to engineering and trim features.

New grilles are offered on the Nova Concours, Chevelle and Monte Carlo. The "soft-nose" front end will be optional on the Monza Towne Coupe. A new range of exterior colors and interior trim is available.

Axle ratios have been revised for improved driveability and fuel economy. A new "Pulse Air" system replaces the Air Injection Reactor system on Chevelle, Vega and Monza four-cylinder engines. Catalytic converters will be used across the board.

The one-barrel 140-CID four and the 262-CID V-8 have been discontinued. Corrosion protection has been improved. A new radiator pressure relief cap is standard on all cars.

Chevrolet has dropped the Cosworth Vega and the Chevelle Laguna in 1977. The division's model count has been trimmed to 36 from 45 in 1976.

Montego nameplate missing Mercury redesigns intermediates

Changes in the '77 Mercury lineup of cars are highlighted by a complete redesign of the intermediate series. The Montego nameplate has been dropped, and all intermediates now carry the Cougar tag.

The '77 Cougar line, although tastefully restyled, is in the "old" tradition of intermediates. There hasn't been any of the dramatic lopping off of length and pounds which characterizes the General Motors program.

Wheelbase on the Cougar four-door sedan is the same as last year's comparable Montego, while overall length and height are about the same as the '76 Montego. Curb weight is down 213 pounds, though this is partially due to a smaller V-8. A 302-cubic-inch engine is standard for 1977; a 351 was standard for '76.

Mercury's lineup includes three fewer models as a result of the Montego/Cougar revisions. There are now 22 models in five car lines instead of 26 models in six. There were six new models added to the Cougar line, bringing the total to seven, while eight were dropped with the elimination of Montego. One model was also dropped in the Monarch and Marquis lines.

For '77, there is expanded use of pre-coated steel body panels in areas such as fenders, quarter panels, rear outer wheelhouses and door outer panels among all car lines to help protect cars against rust and corrosion.

To meet new federal and California emission standards, six and eight-cylinder engines have increased compression ratios or improved combustion chambers. Higher-voltage DuraSpark ignition systems and new or recalibrated carburetors were incorporated. Exhaust system catalysts were improved. In California, the 302 V-8 engine is equipped with a variable-venturi carburetor.

The net result is a longer recommended interval between oil and oil-filter changes now equal to 7,500 miles and 15,000 miles, respectively.

The 400 four-barrel engine failed to meet 1977 emission certification tests and was dropped from the lineup. It had previously been an option on the Cougar, Montego and Marquis car lines.

Simulated wire wheel covers are available on the standard Mercury, Comet and Monarch. A high-altitude option will be marketed in high-altitude areas of the U.S. for all models, allowing them to meet emission standards where the air is thin.

Bobcat improved this year

The two '77 Bobcat models—two-door hatchback and two-door wagon—offer mechanical improvements, reduced maintenance, lower weight, one major appearance change and various new options.

The appearance change is the optional all-glass third door on the Runabout. The entire door structure is tempered glass.

There are six new exterior colors and a new chamois-color interior trim.

Front and rear bumpers on Bobcats are of a new extruded aluminum design with a bright anodized surface. The lighter-weight bumpers, along with other minor weight reductions, lopped 127 pounds from the hatchback model and 11 pounds from the station wagon.

There have been suspension revisions, providing a firmer ride, and manual transmission levers have been shortened.

Other functional changes include a 2.73 rear-axle ratio and standard four-speed manual transmission with wide-spaced gear ratios for the Runabout (except in high-altitude areas).

The four-way manually adjustable driver's seat and flip-up or removable Moonroof highlight the new options. A new Sports Instrumentation/Handling Group has been made available.

Dodge Aspen: slightly modified

Chrysler Corp. in this model year is continuing to go with its winner in the small-car category. The Dodge Aspen has been a fast-moving item and has been modified only slightly.

The new Slant-Six two-barrel engine, offering more power and good fuel economy, is standard in the Aspen wagon and optional in all other models.

Appearance changes are lacking, but there have been changes in optional and standard equipment.

For example, an optional plaid cloth and vinyl trim is available for the Aspen Special Edition wagon with the optional 60/40 seat. That trim package includes shag carpets and plaid door inserts.

Availability of the 60/40 seat has been extended across the line. Last year it was available only on the top-of-the-line model.

A floor-mounted three-speed transmission is standard on the Aspen SE coupes and four-doors. Last year, automatic transmission was standard on those cars.

The Dodge Aspen is available in eight models. They are:

Aspen — four-door sedan, coupe and four-door two-seat wagon.

Aspen Custom — four-door sedan and coupe.

Aspen Special Edition — four-door sedan, coupe and four-door two-seat wagon.

Buick redesigns its full-size automobiles

Buick's full size cars — LeSabre, Electra and Riviera — all have been redesigned and reduced in size for 1977 and feature improved fuel economy, ride and handling.

New grilles are found on Skyhawk, Skylark and Century. Two new models, the LeSabre sport coupe and the Estate Limited wagon, are offered. All three-seat wagons become options in '77, and full-size hardtops have been dropped from the lineup.

Two new Electra sedans replace the C-body hardtops, while LeSabre two-door hardtops have been superseded by coupe models.

Mercury has one less model

The standard-size Mercury Marquis line has one less model this year, with the deletion of the Colony Park wagon bringing the total to seven models. Last year's Colony Park wagon is now an option on the Marquis station wagon.

Improvements include extended oil changes and greater use of precoated steel as with other car lines, and a standard coolant recovery system, a new lower 2.47 rear-axle ratio and Dura-Spark ignition system.

Appearance changes include new exterior colors, interior colors and the popular half-vinyl roof made standard on Brougham and Grand Marquis two-door models.

New options include an Illuminated Entry System, an Am/FM/MPX radio, with Quadrosonic 8 tape player, simulated wire wheel covers and a lowerbody vinyl coating.

Mercury's model lineup for 1977 is as follows:

Marquis — Four-door sedan, two-door hardtop and four-door two-seat wagon.

Marquis Brougham — Four-door sedan and two-door hardtop.

Grand Marquis — Four-door sedan and two-door hardtop.

New engines for '77 include the 301-cubic-inch V-8 and the 403 V-8. Discontinued this year are the 260 V-8, the two-barrel 350 V-8 and the 455 V-8.

Options include a new integrated digital clock-AM-FM stereo radio, plus two CB radios. One is a hang-on CB-only model; the other is an in-dash unit, featuring AM, FM stereo and CB and is available only on the standard-size cars. Front disk brakes are standard on all car lines.

Substantial weight savings, resulting in better fuel economy, have been achieved in Buick's full-size cars for 1977. The LeSabre sedan, for instance, has shed more than 650 pounds from last year.

In addition, LeSabre models and the Estate wagons now use a 115.9-inch wheelbase, while Electra is built on a wheelbase of 118.9 inches. These dimensions compare with 124 inches for LeSabre in '76 and 127 inches for Electra and the Estate Wagon.

Overall length on the '77 LeSabre is 218.2 inches, compared with 226.9 inches last year. Electra is 222.1 inches long, compared with 233.4 inches in 1976.

The LeSabre sport coupe and the Estate Limited wagon are new. So are the LeSabre and LeSabre Custom coupes, plus the Electra 225 and Electra Limited sedans. Discontinued are the LeSabre and LeSabre Custom two-door and four-door hardtops, plus the Electra 225 and Electra Limited four-door hardtops. Third seats are optional on Estate and Estate Limited wagons.

The top-of-the-line Park Avenue option version of the Electra Limited four-door sedan is continued in '77.

The 231 V-6 is standard on LeSabre, while the 350 V-8 is the base engine on Electra and the Estate wagons. A 403 V-8 is available, and the 301 V-8 is optional on the LeSabre only.

Cadillac still looks Cadillac — although smaller

Major dimensional changes in the standard Cadillac line head 1977 new-model developments from the division. Stylists have kept the new downsized Cadillacs from looking downsized, however, they retain the Cadillac look.

All 1977 Cadillacs, except Seville, are powered by a new lighter-weight 425-cubic-inch V-8, which replaces the old 500-inch engine. Electronic fuel injection is optional on DeVille, Brougham and Eldorado models. Seville continues to be powered by a 350-cubic-inch V-8 with electronic fuel injection.

Use of four-wheel disc brakes as standard equipment will be expanded to include Seville and Brougham, as well as Eldorado.

Cadillac said new emphasis has been placed on improved corrosion protection. Extensive anti-corrosion features include use of zinc-rich primers, deadeners, plastisol, hot melt sealers and wax coatings in strategic locations.

Other corrosion protection advances involve use of galvanized steel, zinc-iron alloy, zincrometal and bi-metal moldings (stainless steel laminated to aluminum).

A new optional AM-FM pushbutton stereo radio with 23-channel Citizens Band controls and integral power antenna is available, as is a new AM-FM pushbutton stereo radio with digital display.

All models offer a new electronic cruise control option which includes resume and advance features, allowing the driver increased flexibility.

All Cadillac speedometers for 1977 include both miles per hour and kilometers per hour. Maximum speed displayed is 85 MPH.

All vinyl roofs, except on Eldorado, are new padded Tuxedo grain material. Eldorado uses an elk-grain padded vinyl roof. Sixteen vinyl roof color choices are available.

Biggest news for 1977, of course, is in the standard line, which has been downsized in exterior dimensions but not, the division says, in interior passenger compartment space. Or in luxury.

Wheelbase of the DeVille and Brougham models has been trimmed from 130 and 133 inches, respectively, to 121.5 inches for '77. Overall length has been reduced from 230.7 inches for DeVille and 233.7 for Brougham to 221.2 inches.

Wheelbase of the limousines has been cut from 151.5 inches to 144.5 and overall length from 252.2 inches to 244.2.

The most dramatic change from last year, however, is in weight — an average reduction, Cadillac said, of more than 950 pounds.

Cadillac said the downsizing has been achieved with no loss of passenger comfort or security. In fact, it said, front and rear legroom in the DeVille has been increased.

Exterior styling is all new for '77, marked by well-defined edges which seem to extend the crisp lines of the hood and front fenders. Full rear-wheel openings create a lighter look from the side.

The Fleetwood Brougham features a taped center side pillar and custom trimmed rear window. The Coupe DeVille sports an isolated rear quarter window.

Cadillac retains its traditional cross-hatch grille. New bumpers have dual rubber strip inserts for greater protection. Rear styling is highlighted by new vertical integrated tail and side marker lamps, positioned above the outer rear bumper.

The Calais series has been dropped and the 1977 Cadillac is offered in five models in two series:

DeVille — Four-door sedan and coupe.

Fleetwood — Brougham four-door sedan, eight-passenger limousine and formal limousine.

Ford LTD

Exterior changes are offered on all models

The middle-series two-door and four-door Brougham sedans have been discontinued, reducing 1977 model availability from eight to six.

Power-team availability has been increased with the addition of a 400-cubic-inch, four-barrel V-8, which is standard in California. A 2.47:1 rear-axle ratio is standard with the two-barrel 351, the two-barrel 400 V-8 and the four-barrel 400 V-8.

Luxurious split-bench seats now are available on all models as an independent option. They include dual center armrests, have separate right and left adjustment and feature a fully reclining passenger-side seat-back.

Astre sports new trim

The subcompact Astre has a new grille and interior trim. The 140 four is standard on the coupe, while the 151 four is the base engine on the hatchback coupe and Safari wagon.

The Formula package is optional on all models. Available transmissions include three-four and five-speed manuals, plus the Turbo Hydramatic.

group option is the illuminated entry system.

The model lineup for 1977 follows: Two-door and four-door sedans, two-door and four-door Landau sedans, four-door two-seat station wagon and four-door two-seat Country Squire station wagon.

Front end modifications set for '77 Olds Cutlass

All mid-size Cutlasses receive front-end modifications, plus new instrument panels and some new engines.

The base Cutlass S again features dual rectangular headlamps as do all Cutlass models in '77, with standard front bench seat and 231 V-6 engine, plus three-speed manual transmission. The sporty 4-4-2 option again is available.

The Cutlass Supreme, Supreme Brougham, Salon and Vista Cruiser share a new vertical-bar grille, and tail lamps have been redesigned on the coupes and sedans. The 231 V-6 is standard on Supreme and Supreme Brougham, while the 260 V-8 is standard on Salon. The 350 V-8 is the base engine on Vista Cruiser.

A three-speed manual transmission is standard on Supreme and Supreme Brougham, with Turbo Hydramatic standard on Salon and Vista Cruiser. A five-speed manual overdrive transmission is optional on call coupes (except Supreme Brougham) equipped with the 231 V-6.

Power steering, steel-belted radial tires, plus power-assisted front disk and rear drum brakes, are standard on all Cutlass models.

Other options include a hangeon CB radio, an in-dash AM-FM stereo-CB unit, power windows, rear window defogger, power door locks, air conditioning, vinyl roof, padded sport steering wheel, power antenna, driver-operated load-leveling system and fuel-economy meter. An optional third seat is available on Vista Cruiser.

Dodge restyles its intermediates for '77

Dodge cars for the 1977 model year hit the market with a pronged approach. The Aspen small cars are being emphasized; the intermediates have been restyled and realigned, and under-the-skin engineering changes have been made in the standard-car lineup.

The Dart line has been discontinued, as anticipated. The Coronet nameplate disappears with the advent of the 1977s. Succeeding it is the Monaco line — Monaco and Monaco Brougham.

The standard-size cars are in the Royal Monaco line. Again, there are two price groupings — Royal Monaco and Royal Monaco Brougham.

Across the line, there is greater availability of the Chrysler lean-burn engine. Last year, the electronic spark advance system was available only on the 400-cubic-inch V-8. In '77 it may be ordered with the 360 and the 440-cubic-inch V-8s as well. A lean burn version of the 318 V-8 will be sold later in the year.

Also across the board is use of a new factory-applied coating aimed at improved protection from rust. The coating is applied to front frame assemblies in what is called an Autophoretic coating system.

Expansion of availability of lean burn means it is being offered in all Chrysler Corp. domestic cars sizes, including the Aspen. Plans call for production of 400,000 lean burn engines in the 1977 model run. That compares with 109,000 in the '76 run.

Because federal standards covering oxides of nitrogen emissions for '77 are stiffer than those for '76 models, catalytic converters are being installed on lean-burn cars and unleaded gas is required. However, with the lean burn catalytic system, no exhaust gas recirculation is required.

Another under-hood change this year is a Slant-Six 225-cubic-inch engine with two barrel carburetion. That power plant, available in Aspen and the intermediate Monaco, joins the Chrysler Slant-Six with single-barrel carburetion.

Federal standards have induced about $75 in changes in Dodge cars this year. Included are front and rear structures that will withstand certain specific impacts of up to 30 miles an hour and side impact of up to 20 MPH. Changes also are designed to prevent fuel spillage in roll-over accidents.

Oil-change intervals have been extended on all the Dodges to six months or 7,500 miles from six months or 5,000 miles.

Thunderbird's wrapover roof striking addition

Sheet metal is all new. Added to the traditional full-width tail lights and long-hood, short-deck appearance are a wrapover roof with coach and opera windows, cross-hatch grille, concealed headlamps and fender louvers.

The 114-inch wheelbase and overall length of 215.5 inches are 6.4 inches and 10.3 inches less, respectively, than their comparable '76 dimensions.

Standard power team is the 302-cubic-inch V-8 and Select-Shift automatic transmission. Power brakes and power steering also are standard.

In 1977, air conditioning, power windows, vinyl roof, radio and several other items of equipment are optional. Previously, they were standard.

New options include an interior luxury group, luxury instrumentation group featuring a tachometer and engine gauges, illuminated entry system, analog day/date clock, bucket seats and console and turbine-spoke, cast aluminum wheels.

As in 1976, there is only one model, a two-door sedan.

Grille changed

Appearance changes on the compact Buick Skylark model are limited to a new grille. The 231 V-6 is the base power plant; optional are 301 and 350 V-8s.

Seven models in three series are offered:

Skylark S — coupe, hatchback coupe and four-door sedan.

Skylark S — coupe, hatchback coupe and four-door sedan.

LJ models joins Grand Prix line

The new top-of-the-line intermediate, the LJ, joins the two Pontiac Grand Prix models, all of which receive new front-end styling and tail lamps in 1977.

The 301 V-8 is standard on the base model and SJ, while the 400 V-8 is standard on the LJ.

Pontiac LeMans has new front-end treatment

The intermediate LeMans from Pontiac has a new front-end treatment. Dual rectangular headlamps return.

Engines range from a 231 V-6 to a 400 V-8. Three-speed manual and Turbo Hydramatic transmissions are available.

Options include an RTS rally package, a

GT package (on the sport coupe), engine-block heater, power seat, air conditioning, padded landau top and canopy top. Louvered rear quarter windows are optional on the sport coupe.

Seven models in two series, the same as in 1976, are offered. They include the following: LeMans — Coupe, sport coupe, four-door sedan and four-door two-seat wagon.

Grand LeMans — Coupe, four-door sedan and four-door two-seat wagon.

Full-size Olds are completely new for '77

In addition to its all-new Delta and Ninety-Eight models, Oldsmobile has made a number of changes in its lineup for 1977. All five car lines have received at least minor facelifts this year. In the case of the full-size Delta and Ninety-Eight, the redesign is from the ground up, with Delta models sharing the same 116-inch wheelbase as the four-door Cutlass intermediates.

Last year, Delta had a wheelbase of 124 inches, while Ninety-Eight's wheelbase was 127 inches. For 1977, Ninety-Eight will be built on a wheelbase of 119 inches. Delta has been trimmed about nine inches in overall length from the '76 version, with Ninety-Eight losing about 12 inches.

The model count has been trimmed to 28 from 34 a year ago. Basically, this is how the Olds scorecard stacks up for '77: Discontinued are the Cutlass Supreme Cruiser four-door wagon, Cutlass Salon four-door sedan, Toronado Custom coupe, all Delta two-door and four-door hardtops, plus all Ninety-Eight four-door hardtops.

New are the Cutlass Supreme Brougham four-door sedan, two Delta coupes, two Ninety-Eight four-door sedans and the Toronado XSR coupe. The full-size Custom Cruiser three-seat and woodgrain wagons are counted as options, rather than separate models, for 1977.

Oldsmobile introduces a new 403-cubic-inch V-8 for 1977, and Starfire will get a 140-inch four for the first time. In some cases, a 231-CID V-6 replaces the 250-inch inline six, which has been dropped. The big 455 V-8 has been discontinued, too, as has the two-barrel 350.

Oldsmobile said it has redesigned its V-8s and some automatic transmissions for lighter weight, and corrosion resistance has been improved on all lines. A new "thermac" control unit improves cold-start driveability on V-8s. Delta and Ninety-Eight models feature a new diagnostic system and fuse block.

The division also introduces electronic spark timing with microprocessor on the Toronado in '77. In-dash AM-FM stereo CB units are optional on Cutlass, Delta, Ninety-Eight and Toronado.

A line-by-line summary of features follows:

Oldsmobile

Both full-size Oldsmobiles, the Delta 88 and the Ninety-Eight, are brand new for '77. All hardtop models have been eliminated; two-door Deltas become coupes and four-door Ninety-Eights become sedans.

All cars have been reduced in size and weight for better fuel economy. Handling has been improved.

Comet still available in two models

Comet continues to be available in two models, four-door sedan and two-door New color and trim combinations have been added. There are seven new exterior colors and new vinyl roof colors. Bright window frames have been deleted, and bright drip moldings have been added.

There is a new base seat and door trim panel, essentially more spartan than last year's. In essence, some of the plushness has been taken out of the standard model, and made optional with the new Interior and Exterior Decor Groups.

The Comet line features changes incorporated in other Mercury lines, like more anti-corrosion precoated steel panels, longer oil and oil-filter changes and higher-voltage ignition system.

Options are highlighted by the four-way manually adjustable bucket seat for driver's side and simulated wire wheel covers.

Skyhawk

The subcompact Buick Skyhawk has a new "egg-crate" grille design this year, but otherwise is unchanged from 1976. The 231 V-6 is the only available engine.

Model availability reduced on Ford LTD

The new intermediate nameplate features a chrome-plated, cross-hatch grille flanked by dual, vertical and rectangular headlamps and fender-mounted parking lamps.

Two-door and four-door sedans have a wide, almost flat rear-deck lid and a low rear window. The sedans also feature a straight beltline with extensive side glass.

Newly designed opera windows are optional on all two-door and four-door models and standard with optional vinyl roofs.

Outside California, the improved 302 V-8 is the standard engine for sedans and the 351 V-8 is standard for wagons. In California, the 351 is standard on sedans and the 400 is standard on wagons. Automatic transmission is standard on all models.

The eight models for 1977 include: Two-door and four-door LTD II S sedans, four-door two-seat LTD II S station wagon; two-door and four-door LTD II sedans, four-door two-seat LTD II station wagon, four-door LTD II Brougham sedan and four-door two-seat LTD II Squire station wagon.

Front and rear crossed-flags emblems are new, while the front fender nameplate and airinlet grille on the hood have been scrapped. Cloth and leather seat trim is available for the first time, and the floor console has been redesigned.

New options for '77 include AM-FM stereo radio with tape, speed and cruise control, factory-installed luggage rack and glass canopy roof.

Page 11—AUTO ALMANAC—INDEPENDENT PRESS-TELEGRAM

The new Continental Mark V, successor to the Mark IV, incorporates the greatest sheet metal change in Lincoln's '77 lineup. Mark V's changes include only body sheet metal, and wheelbase remains the same.

Mark V, like the Lincoln Continental, lost weight for '77, reflecting Ford Motor's continuing effort to improve fuel economy. In Mark V's case, the car moved from a 5,000-pound category into the 4,000-pound range.

The 460-cubic-inch four-barrel V-8 is the standard powerplant on the Lincoln Continental in 49 states and the 400 two-barrel is standard on Continental in California.

The 400 two-barrel is standard on Mark V in the 50 states, with the 460 four-barrel optional everywhere except California.

The 400-cubic-inch four-barrel V-8, supposed to be standard on the California Continentals and California Mark V, flunked the emissions test.

Lincoln Continental

Lincoln's model lineup is the same as in 1976 with four models offered. They are the four-door sedan and coupe, the Town Car four-door sedan and the Town Coupe.

From the front, the appearance of the '77 Continental, with its radiator-style, vertical-bar grille, strongly resembles the Mark V.

Standard on the Town Car/Town Coupe and optional on other Continentals is a new Valino grain vinyl roof. There are five new vinyl roof colors with matching exterior grains.

Inside, chamois and cordovan are new trim colors, available in all trim styles and models. Special for the Town Coupe is a new cordovan and white leather and vinyl trim.

Along with the expanded use of precoated steel for corrosion protection, exhaust emission systems use a new higher-volume catalyst. Revisions in the response throttle linkage and higher-voltage ignition systems help yield longer 7,500 and 15,000-mile intervals for oil changes and oil filter changes.

An AM-FM monaural radio, including four speakers and power antenna, is standard on all models.

been deleted as standard equipment on coupes.

Black bumper rub strips and bumper guards, replacing black and white inserts, are new options. The Coach Roof is available as an option on all models.

Among other new options is the Illuminated Entry System, which provides extra convenience and security when entering the car, and a lower body vinyl coating which is sprayed on before the car is painted and protects against abrasion and nicks.

Mustang II:

New options and appearance and engineering refinements are the principal features of the '77 Mustang models.

The flip-up/removable moonroof, four-way adjustable driver's seat and a sports appearance group for the Ghia models are examples of the new options.

The Ghia sports-appearance package is available with a black or tan exterior and features such color-coordinated components as a console, three-spoke steering wheel, cast aluminum wheels with chamois-colored spokes and a trunk luggage rack with hold-down straps and bright buckles.

and white and green and white.

There again are four models in the '77 lineup: Two-door sedan, three-door fastback, two-door Ghia sedan and three-door Mach I fastback.

All Lincoln Continentals lost weight for 1977

The new Continental Mark V, successor to the Mark IV, incorporates the greatest sheet metal change in Lincoln's '77 lineup. Mark V's changes include only body sheet metal, and wheelbase remains the same.

Mark V, like the Lincoln Continental, lost weight for '77, reflecting Ford Motor's continuing effort to improve fuel economy. In Mark V's case, the car moved from a 5,000-pound category into the 4,000-pound range.

The 460-cubic-inch four-barrel V-8 is the standard powerplant on the Lincoln Continental in 49 states and the 400 two-barrel is standard on Continental in California.

The 400 two-barrel is standard on Mark V in the 50 states, with the 460 four-barrel optional everywhere except California.

The 400-cubic-inch four-barrel V-8, supposed to be standard on the California Continentals and California Mark V, flunked the emissions test.

Lincoln Continental

Lincoln's model lineup is the same as in 1976 with four models offered. They are the four-door sedan and coupe, the Town Car four-door sedan and the Town Coupe.

Weight reduction programs resulted in 221 pounds being shaved off the Continental four-door sedan.

From the front, the appearance of the '77 Continental, with its radiator-style, vertical-bar grille, strongly resembles the Mark V.

Standard on the Town Car/Town Coupe and optional on other Continentals is a new Valino grain vinyl roof. There are five new vinyl roof colors with matching exterior grains.

Inside, chamois and cordovan are new trim colors, available in all trim styles and models. Special for the Town Coupe is a new cordovan and white leather and vinyl trim.

Along with the expanded use of precoated steel for corrosion protection, exhaust emission systems use a new higher-volume catalyst. Revisions in the response throttle linkage and higher-voltage ignition systems help yield longer 7,500 and 15,000-mile intervals for oil changes and oil filter changes.

An AM-FM monaural radio, including four speakers and power antenna, is standard on all models.

The power window lockout switch has been deleted as standard equipment on coupes.

Black bumper rub strips and bumper guards, replacing black and white inserts, are new options. The Coach Roof is available as an option on all models.

Among other new options is the Illuminated Entry System, which provides extra convenience and security when entering the car, and a lower body vinyl coating which is sprayed on before the car is painted and protects against abrasion and nicks.

Mustang II:

Refinements are major

New options and appearance and engineering refinements are the principal features of the '77 Mustang models.

The flip-up/removable moonroof, four-way adjustable driver's seat and a sports appearance group for the Ghia models are examples of the new options.

The Ghia sports-appearance package is available with a black or tan exterior and features such color-coordinated components as a console, three-spoke steering wheel, cast aluminum wheels with chamois-colored spokes and a trunk luggage rack with hold-down straps and bright buckles.

The Cobra II option is extended to five color combinations for 1977. The two new color schemes are red and white and green and white.

There again are four models in the '77 lineup: Two-door sedan, three-door fastback, two-door Ghia sedan and three-door Mach I fastback.

Front end styling — Cougar line is completely restyled — is new for Pinto Front-end styling is new, and the sedan and Runabout have new large, European-styled tail lights. There is an optional all-glass third door for the Run-about and a new Cruising Wagon option.

The new "soft" front end features a sloping hood, horizontal bar grille and urethane plastic headlamp housings.

Ford's first "glass-back," a tempered-glass door, has no reinforcements for rims and is attached to the body with regular hinges bolted to the glass. The door also uses a conventional lock and hold-up devices.

Features of the Cruising Wagon option include a steel panel with a porthole in place of the wagon's rear-side windows, a paint job with graphics and stripes, four styled-steel wheels, sports instrumentation and more rear inside carpeting.

Two new options are a four-way, manually adjustable driver's seat and a flip-up moonroof, which can be opened to the rear for ventilation or removed entirely.

The Cougar line has been completely restyled for '77 and is offered in seven models. Last year, there were eight Montegos and one Cougar. The 1977 selections:

Cougar Brougham — Four-door sedan, coupe, four-door two-seat Villager wagon.

Cougar XR-7 — Coupe.

Exterior appearance on these cars is highlighted by a vertical front grille and dual rectangular headlamps. Combination parking, turn signal and side marker lights in the fender extensions emphasize a wide stance.

In the rear, the XR-7 is set apart from other models by horizontal, wraparound tail lights and a stylized spare-tire deck lid similar to Mark IV.

Cougar and Cougar Brougham coupes and sedans share a different look with vertical tail lamps in the fenders and wide combination reflector and backup lights in the lower panel above the bumper.

A large opera window with louvers and a padded Landau roof give the XR-7 a sporty look.

The Cougar and Cougar Brougham two-door models look different with a quarter window that extends farther back into the rear pillar than the XR-7.

A large opera window is standard on the Cougar Brougham and optional on the Cougar series. The four-door Cougar Brougham includes a small standard opera window and full vinyl roof.

Flight bench seats are standard on the Cougar XR-7, Cougar Brougham and Cougar Villager Wagon. These models are also available with Twin Comfort Lounge seats. All two-doors are available with the sporty bucket seats and console.

All regular models have a standard 302-cubic-inch V-8. All station wagons have a standard 351 V-8. In California, all regular models have a standard 351 V-8 and all station wagons a standard 400 two-barrel V-8.

Some of Cougar's new options include AM/FM/MPX radio with Quadrosonic 8 tape player, cornering lamps, Illuminated Entry System and Decor Option.

Starfire introduces standard 140 four

A vertical-bar grille and a standard 140 four are new for the luxury-small Starfire. A four-speed manual synchromesh transmission is standard. The 231 V-6, plus a five-speed manual transmission and Turbo Hydra-matic, are optional.

Dual rectangular headlamps return in '77, as does the GT option package. Front disk brakes are standard, and options include power brakes, air conditioning, tinted glass, power steering, AM-FM radio with tape, tilt steering wheel and rear-window defogger.

Continental Mark V retains traditional design

The Mark V, redesigned for '77, retains its bright radiator shell front grille and traditional Continental deck lid.

The Mark V also has a standard wide color-keyed vinyl insert bodyside molding and new functional louvers on the front fender. In the rear, it has fender-mounted vertical tail lights and backup lights in the bumper.

The interior has a new pleated sew style for the Twin-Comfort lounge seats, new soft Venezia velour and vinyl-seat trim and a new instrument panel cluster with high-gloss woodtone appliques. A new Cartier day/date clock with quartz crystal accuracy is standard.

New technical features include expanded use of precoated steel for corrosion protection, new exhaust emission control system with larger-volume catalyst and a new standard automatic temperature control air conditioning setup with larger air volume than in 1976 and driver selection of fan speed.

The Illuminated Entry System, De-Iroster Group and turbine-spoke cast aluminum wheels (standard in California) head the list of new options. An Interior Light Group and rocker panel molding are also being featured for the first time.

The Space-Saver spare tire is standard. A Space-Saver delete option is available. Oil-change intervals have been increased to 7,500 miles and oil-filter-change intervals to 15,000 miles.

Mark V shed 391 pounds as a result of weight-reduction efforts.

Few changes this year for Maverick

There are few changes in the final year for the compact Maverick nameplate.

They are limited mainly to new exterior and interior color selections, option changes and engineering refinements.

The driver's bucket seat now is available with the four-way manual adjustment.

Other option changes include simulated wire-wheel covers and new vinyl bodyside molding and wheel covers. The luxury decor option, forged aluminum wheels and security lock group have been deleted.

Again, there will be two models: Two-door sedan and four-door sedan.

Break out the superlatives, it's time to talk about the intermediate segment of the domestic car market.

The rave words are in order because the mid-size cars are reveling in an astonishingly successful year. Volume was up 41 percent for the first nine months of 1976, and market penetration climbed to 32.21 percent, up a hearty 2.89 percentage points from 29.32 percent a year earlier.

And the prognosis for 1977 is excellent. Ford Motor's intermediates have been restyled and renamed, and Ford Division alone is looking for a sales increase of 88 percent.

As for the renaming, Torino becomes LTD II, and all Mercury intermediates are Cougars — no more Montego. The Thunderbird name has moved to the intermediate class (replacing Elite), and Ford is betting that the new size and much lower price will enhance the T-Bird aura.

At GM, the intermediates will be selling against their own not-so-big-anymore brothers, the down-sized standard cars. The intermediates have a decided price advantage, and price has been known to sell a car now and then.

So a sales increase is in the offing for the mid-size models, and it should be accompanied by a rise in penetration, perhaps to 34 or 35 percent of the domestic market.

For 1977, the intermediate category is made up of 15 nameplates and 76 models — 21 four-door sedans, 33 coupes and 22 four-door wagons. Sticker prices generally range from $4,000 to $5,300. Seville, the luxury intermediate costs a bit more. It's $13,359.

There have been some tremendous sales gains in the intermediate class this year, with Grand Prix pacing the pack. Sales of the Pontiac entry in the first nine months nearly tripled those of the year-ago period. The actual increase was 194 percent. There were gains of 73 percent for Cougar, 69 percent for Century, 61 percent for Cutlass and 56 percent for Elite.

Also among the winners were Monte Carlo, up 41 percent; Torino, 33 percent; Cordoba, 30 percent; and Chevelle, 23 percent. LeMans also finished ahead of last year, but its climb was a scant 3 percent. Grand Prix probably stole a lot of LeMans sales.

The Dodge intermediates — Coronet/Charger and Charger S.E. — were up 6 percent.

Seville, a mid-term entry in 1975, doubled its sales in the first nine months of 1976.

But it wasn't all milk and honey. Montego was off 4 percent for the period, and Fury showed a dip of percent. Matador was down 43 percent.

Cutlass, the top-selling domestic nameplate, naturally was the intermediate sales king of the first nine months, followed by Monte Carlo, Chevelle, Century and Grand Prix. Guess what corporation sells the most intermediates.

Firebird offers new front-end styling

The compact Firebird's front end has been restyled, with dual rectangular headlamps, and it has a new energy-absorbing urethane bumper system. The "T-Top" option with removable roof panels returns.

Engine availability ranges from a 231 V-6 to a high-performance 400 V-8. Three-speed and four-speed manual transmissions, plus Turbo Hydramatic, are offered.

Special appearance and interior-trim packages are available. Options include air conditioning, cruise control and fuel economy indicator.

Four models, all of them coupes, again are offered: Base Firebird, Esprit, Formula and Trans Am.

Four-speed overdrive is new on '77 Granada

The division's best-selling car has a new four-speed overdrive manual transmission, standard with the two six-cylinder engines and the 302-cubic-inch V-8.

New options include automatic temperature-control air conditioning, front cornering lights, manual four-way adjustable driver's bucket seat, a cold-weather group

An electric rear-window defroster now is available with Granadas powered by the six-cylinder engines and equipped with air conditioning.

There are four models, the same as in 1976: Two-door sedan, four-door sedan, two-door Ghia sedan and four-door Ghia sedan.

FORD FOR '77:

Intermediate gets new nameplate

An all-new, mid-size Thunderbird, plus a new nameplate in the intermediate segment, are the big news in Ford Division's 1977 product lineup.

Ford says the new T-Bird features its traditional big-car luxury, ride and prestige in a smaller, lower-priced package. The '77 edition has almost the same dimensions as the discontinued intermediate Elite.

The LTD II, a junior-size version of its namesake (the standard LTD), is the replacement for the intermediate Torino. It will be offered in three series and eight models, compared with nine '76 Torino models.

Both the T-Bird and the LTD II sedans will have a smaller standard engine than last year's Bird and Torino. It's a two-barrel 302-cubic-inch V-8. A variety of bigger V-8s is optional.

Technical highlights of the new models are expanded use of pre-coated steel for greater corrosion protection, extended oil and oil-filter change intervals, optional exterior vinyl coating and the DuraSpark ignition system.

Precoated steel will be used on all car quarter panels, outer rear wheelhouses, outer door panels, front fenders and quarter lock pillars on all four-door models.

All cars except Maverick also will have precoated steel for the inner and outer deck lids. On Maverick, zinc-rich primer will continue to be used on the trailing edge of the deck-lid panels. Pinto front fenders use one-sided galvanized steel instead of precoated steel.

After initial oil and filter changes at 7,500 miles, the oil-change interval is every 7,500 miles and the filter interval is every 15,000 miles.

The high-energy DuraSpark system, according to Ford, delivers 31 percent more spark-plug voltage in starting and 38 percent more when running compared with the '76 system. The higher voltages provide more positive ignition for easy starts and smooth running, the company claims.

'77 could top '76 for intermediates

Break out the superlatives, it's time to talk about the intermediate segment of the domestic car market.

The rave words are in order because the mid-size cars are reveling in an astonishingly successful year. Volume was up 41 percent for the first nine months of 1976, and market penetration climbed to 32.21 percent, up a hearty 2.89 percentage points from 29.32 percent a year earlier.

And the prognosis for 1977 is excellent. Ford Motor's intermediates have been restyled and renamed, and Ford Division alone is looking for a sales increase of 88 percent.

As for the renaming, Torino becomes LTD II, and all Mercury intermediates are Cougars — no more Montego. The Thunderbird name has moved to the intermediate class (replacing Elite), and Ford is betting that the new size and much lower price will enhance the T-Bird aura.

At GM, the intermediates will be selling against their own not-so-big-any-more brothers, the downsized standard cars. The intermediates have a decided price advantage, and price has been known to sell a car now and then.

So a sales increase is in the offing for the mid-size models, and it should be accompanied by a rise in penetration, perhaps to 34 or 35 percent of the domestic market.

For 1977, the intermediate category is made up of 15 nameplates and 76 models — 21 four-door sedans, 33 coupes and 22 four-door wagons. Sticker prices generally range from $4,000 to $5,300. Seville, the luxury intermediate costs a bit more. It's $13,359.

There have been some tremendous sales gains in the intermediate class this year, with Grand Prix pacing the pack. Sales of the Pontiac entry in the first nine months nearly tripled those of the year-ago period. The actual increase was 194 percent. There were gains of 73 percent for Cougar, 69 percent for Century, 61 percent for Cutlass and 56 percent for Elite.

Also among the winners were Monte Carlo, up 41 percent; Torino, 33 percent; Cordoba, 30 percent, and Chevelle, 23 percent. LeMans also finished ahead of last year, but its climb was a scant 3 percent. Grand Prix probably stole a lot of LeMans sales.

The Dodge intermediates — Coronet/Charger and Charger S.E. — were up 6 percent.

Seville, a mid-term entry in 1975, doubled its sales in the first nine months of 1976.

But it wasn't all milk and honey. Montego was off 4 percent for the period, and Fury showed a dip of percent. Matador was down 43 percent.

Cutlass, the top-selling domestic nameplate, naturally was the intermediate sales king of the first nine months, followed by Monte Carlo, Chevelle, Century and Grand Prix. Guess what corporation sells the most intermediates.

FORD FOR '77:

Intermediate gets new nameplate

An all-new, mid-size Thunderbird, plus a new nameplate in the intermediate segment, are the big news in Ford Division's 1977 product lineup.

Ford says the new T-Bird features its traditional big-car luxury, ride and prestige in a smaller, lower-priced package. The '77 edition has almost the same dimensions as the discontinued intermediate Elite.

The LTD II, a junior-size version of its namesake (the standard LTD), is the replacement for the intermediate Torino. It will be offered in three series and eight models, compared with nine '76 Torino models.

Both the T-Bird and the LTD II sedans will have a smaller standard engine than last year's Bird and Torino. It's a two-barrel 302-cubic-inch V-8. A variety of bigger V-8s is optional.

Technical highlights of the new models are expanded use of pre-coated steel for greater corrosion protection, extended oil and oil-filter change intervals; optional exterior vinyl coating and the DuraSpark ignition system.

Precoated steel will be used on all car quarter panels, outer rear wheelhouses, outer door panels, front fenders and quarter lock pillars on all four-door models.

All cars except Maverick also will have precoated steel for the inner and outer deck lids. On Maverick, zinc-rich primer will continue to be used on the trailing edge of the deck-lid panels. Pinto front fenders use one-sided galvanized steel instead of precoated steel.

After initial oil and filter changes at 7,500 miles, the oil-change interval is every 7,500 miles and the filter interval is every 15,000 miles.

The high-energy DuraSpark system, according to Ford, delivers 31 percent more spark-plug voltage in starting and 38 percent more when running compared with the '76 system. The higher voltages provide more positive ignition for easy starts and smooth running, the company claims.

Firebird offers new front-end styling

The compact Firebird's front end has been restyled, with dual rectangular headlamps, and it has a new energy-absorbing urethane bumper system. The "T-Top" option with removable roof panels returns.

Engine availability ranges from a 231 V-6 to a high-performance 400 V-8. Three-speed and four-speed manual transmissions, plus Turbo Hydramatic, are offered.

Special appearance and interior-trim packages are available. Options include air conditioning, cruise control and fuel economy indicator.

Four models, all of them coupes, again are offered: Base Firebird, Esprit, Formula and Trans Am.

Four-speed overdrive is new on '77 Granada

The division's best-selling car has a new four-speed overdrive manual transmission, standard with the two six-cylinder engines and the 302-cubic-inch V-8.

New options include automatic temperature-control air conditioning, front cornering lights, manual four-way adjustable driver's bucket seat, a cold-weather group and a heavy-duty group.

An electric rear-window defroster now is available with Granadas powered by the six-cylinder engines and equipped with air conditioning.

There are four models, the same as in 1976: Two-door sedan, four-door sedan, two-door Ghia sedan and four-door Ghia sedan.

Small cars: new year, old problem

A year can make a difference. A lot of difference.

Twelve months ago, auto executives were voicing their usual optimistic predictions of what the new model season would bring, but one wondered whether they were trying to convince themselves or their listeners.

The auto industry had been through two rough years. Sales reports were looking better, but auto people were still sort of shell-shocked. They were asking, silently perhaps, "Will the good news last?"

Turn the calendar ahead a year to the 1977 model introduction period. The sales predictions were even higher, but they were delivered in a firm, confident tone that defied the listener to dispute the speaker's ability to sell that many cars. One maker even bestowed a "face on the egg award" upon a newsmen who had doubled (in print) that the car would meet its 1976 goal.

What brought the turnaround in mien and morale? A good sales year did the job, and it had been a very good sales year indeed for each of the Big Three. American Motors was suffering but, even so, the industry achieved year-to-year sales gains in 34 of the 36 10-day periods during the 1976 model year.

Sales guesses for the 1977 season are in the 11-million-car range. General Motors Chairman Thomas A. Murphy is a high man at 11.25 million. Eleven million cars means about 9.5 million domestic autos, a solid 500,000 above the 1976 model year, and '76 was a mighty good year.

Adding the guesses of the various divisional general managers results in a total of nearly 10.3 million domestic cars, but that's a bit much. The 9.5 million figure seems more realistic and more attainable.

Dividing that pie among the three segments of the market — small cars — is the prerogative of the consumer, and it's always risky to second-guess the man with the money, but there are sound reasons to predict that the pattern of the past year will be repeated.

That means a decline in market penetration for the smaller vehicles and increases for the intermediates and standard-size models.

Small-car volume may rise, but it probably won't go up as much as the industry average. That means a drop in market share.

Small cars were the great enigma of the 1976 model year. And the smaller the car, the greater the enigma.

Subcompacts fared poorly. For the first nine months of this year, their sales were 2 percent below the corresponding period of 1975. Sales were falling while the market was rising. And when that happens, you got trouble — right here in Motor City.

Compact cars, on the other hand, have had a good year. Nine-month sales rose 33 percent, which was better than the increase of 29 percent for the entire domestic industry.

As a whole, the small-car class accounted for 41.22 percent of the domestic new-car market in the first nine months of this year. This was down 2.83 percentage points from 44.05 percent in the year-earlier period, and it was a surprise. Most prognosticators guessed that small cars would rise, not drop, in 1976.

What's in store for 1977? Another dip seems to be in the offing, perhaps to as low as 37 percent of domestic sales.

Subcompacts were the culprit in the small-car falloff. Their market share skidded to 12.09 percent, down 3.77 percentage points from 15.86 percent the year before.

Why the disenchantment? Obviously Americans simply don't want domestic cars in that size class although, perversely, they seem to have no objection to imports of about the same dimensions.

Maybe it's psychological. Auto makers tell us that we'll all be driving subcompact or smaller cars if the dreaded 1985 requirement of 27.5 MPG stays on the books. Buyers seem to be replying, "If I gotta do it, I'll do it; but I damn well don't do it before I have to."

WHAT IS BIG?

Battle royal in full-size class

If you're with one of the Big Three, it's the "Donnybrook Division."

If you're elsewhere in the auto industry, it's the "Action Area" or maybe the "Fun Field."

But whatever your affiliation, the standard-size segment of the market is where it's at for 1977.

cussed. It's the "small" big cars of General Motors vs. the "big" big cars of Ford and Chrysler.

Chrysler hasn't said too much about it because big cars really play a rather minor role in Chrysler's program, but Ford and GM are playing the game all the way.

GM insists that its smaller, lighter cars with comparable interior roominess and improved fuel efficiency are, as the ads say, "designed and engineered for a changing world." Its '77 models are as much as a foot shorter and 700 pounds lighter (Cadillac says 950) than their predecessors.

Ford, which has not downsized its '77 standard-size cars, believes that buyers in the big-car class want a car that is exactly that: Big.

Both makers are backing their beliefs with advertising dollars and marketing ammunition, and both have excellent dealer organizations that are well prepared for this important confrontation.

One more point to watch is the acceptance of the six-cylinder engines in many of the new GM cars. The V-8 has long been the basic engine for cars in this class, but this year a six is standard in Chevrolet Impala and Caprice, Pontiac Catalina, Oldsmobile Delta and Delta Royale and Buick LeSabre and LeSabre Custom. Buick tried this for $76 on LeSabre with less than imposing results, but maybe the new smaller, lighter autos will bring a resurgence of the six.

So it looks like another interesting year in the standard-size field. "Another," because the past season has also had its share of excitement.

Market penetration in this class has been sliding for several years, but the big cars managed to end that erosion in the first nine months of 1976. Their share for the period was 26.08 percent. The year-earlier figure was 26.01 percent. The gain was tiny, but the important point was the halting of the downturn trend.

In the coming year, the standard-size class may well boost its market penetration to about 28 percent, and that would be a significant improvement.

Standard-size cars (excluding Cadillac and Lincoln entries) showed a volume gain of 32 percent in the first nine months of 1976. Market share climbed about half a point to 21.93 percent.

Mercury paced the volume advance with an upsurge of 78 percent, followed by Ford with a 47-percent rise. There were gains of 41 percent for Chrysler, Buick and Thunderbird, 39 percent for Oldsmobile and 38 percent for Riviera. Pontiac was up 27 percent; Chevrolet, 18 percent, and Toro-nado, 18 percent. On the other side of the ledger, Dodge volume was off 8 percent, and Plymouth was down 21 percent.

In the luxury-standard section, volume was up 16 percent for the nine-month period, but market share fell about half a point to 4.15 percent.

The big gainers were Lincoln, up 44 percent, and Mark IV, up 32 percent. Cadillac volume rose 13 percent, and Eldorado was down one percent.

Pacer wagon highlights AMC lineup

AMC expands its wagon lineup with the addition of the new luxury-small Pacer wagon in 1977.

The two-door wagon shares many of the sedan's dimensions. Length is four inches greater than that of the sedan, and weight has been increased only 75 pounds.

The wagon's long liftgate extends down to the bumper for easier loading of cargo. Vertical tail lamps are featured. Rack-and-pinion steering is standard on both the sedan and the wagon.

Standard engine is the 232 six with the 258 six as an option. An

"X" package is available on the sedan, and the D/L package is offered on both models.

Gremlin

Styling changes on the sub-compact Gremlin include lower hood, new eggcrate grille and revised headlamp configuration. Depth of the backlight has been increased, and tail lamps have been redesigned. Overall length is four inches less than on previous models.

Standard engine is the 232-cubic-inch six with an optional 258 six available. A four-speed manual transmission is available with both engines, and the 304 V-8 is no longer offered. A special economy package, which includes a 2.53 rear axle combined with the 232 six and four-speed transmission, will be available after production startup.

One model, a two-

Hornet

The AMX name has been revived on a special hatchback coupe version of the compact Hornet. Included in the package are front air dam, front and rear fender flares, back-light louvers, "Targa" roof band, floor console, rally instrumentation, custom trim and special decals and insignia. The 258 six and four-speed manual transmission are standard with the AMX. The 304 V-8 is optional.

An optional D/L luxury package is available on Hornet models, in addition to the sporty "X" package. The 232 six is standard; optional engines include the 258 six and the 304 V-8.

Four models are offered: Hatchback coupe, two-door sedan, four-door sedan and four-door two-seat wagon.

Matador

The intermediate Matador features the following as standard equipment in 1977: Power steering, power front disk brakes, automatic transmission, individual reclining seats, custom steering wheel, plus other convenience and decor items that previously were optional.

All new full-size cars highlight the Pontiac line

Highlights at Pontiac for 1977 include introduction of the division's all-new full-size cars, plus two new engines. In addition, all car lines have received at least minor styling changes, with Ventura, Firebird, LeMans and Grand Prix getting new front-end treatments. Front disc brakes are standard on all models.

The new engines, a 151-cubic-inch (2.5-liter) four and a 301-CID (5-liter) V-8, will be used in all of the division's car lines this year. Ventura, in fact, will be the only U.S. compact with an available four. The 151 four develops 87 horsepower (SAE net) and the 301 V-8 develops 135 HP.

Pontiac is offering a "family of Formulas" that includes special versions of Astre, Sunbird and Firebird. A new Grand Prix model, the LJ, is available. There are 32 models in seven car lines for '77, compared with 31 models last year.

The hardtops are gone from the full-size lineup. Bumpers and some automatic transmissions have been revised for weight savings.

The full-size Catalina and Bonneville have been completely redesigned and are both smaller and lighter in weight than the '76 versions. Both cars share a 116-inch wheelbase and feature comparable interior space to their 1976 counterparts. Overall length is 213.8 inches.

Dual rectangular headlamps are used, with distinctive grilles for both Catalina and Bonneville. A new luxury interior trim package, Valencia, is available on Bonneville Brougham.

A third seat is optional on Catalina Safari and Bonneville Grand Safari wagons, each of which employs a new two-way tailgate.

The Catalina coupe, Bonneville sedan and Bonneville Brougham sedan are new. The hardtops are discontinued. As in 1976, eight full-size models in three series are offered.

Significant changes for Chevelle line

Several significant changes have been made in the intermediate Chevelle line for 1977.

With the discontinuation of the Laguna, Chevelle will be offered only in the Malibu and Malibu Classic series. New grilles and tail lamps, plus new exterior paint and interior trim colors, are featured. The Malibu Classic Estate wagon has been dropped.

The four-barrel 350-CID V-8 replaces the two-barrel version as the optional engine in Chevelle. The 400-CID V-8 is no longer available.

Nine Chevelle models are offered. Three-seat wagons are considered separate models rather than options as in 1976. The lineup includes the following:

Malibu—Coupe, four-door sedan, four-door two-seat wagon and four-door three-seat wagon.

XSR model replaces Toronado coupe

A glassy XSR model replaces the Custom coupe in the high-standard Toronado line in '77. Also new are electronic spark timing and the 403 V-8, which replaces the 455. EST continuously adjusts ignition timing via a microprocessor for optimum fuel economy and driveability.

Also new are the hood, grille and front-end panel. The XSR model features a new roof section that accommodates a large panoramic "wrap-around" rear window. Two electrically operated glass panels stow one over the other in the center roof section.

Other standard items include Turbo Hydra-matic transmission, steel-belted radial tires, power-assisted front disk and rear drum brakes, electric windows, power steering, air conditioning and maintenance-free battery.

Options include six-way power front seat, electric door locks, electric sunroof with built-in sunshade, rear-window defogger, driver-operated load-leveling system, cruise control, tilt-and-telescope steering wheel, CB radio and AM-FM stereo radio.

Two models again are offered: Brougham coupe and XSR coupe.

Camaro unchanged

The compact Camaro is basically unchanged from 1976. The 250-CID six becomes the standard engine on the Type LT, replacing the 305-cubic-inch V-8. The manual transmissions have been redesigned, and axle ratios have been reduced. The Rally Sport option continues.

Two Camaro models are available: Coupe and LT coupe.

Pacer wagon highlights AMC lineup

AMC expands its wagon lineup with the addition of the new luxury-small Pacer wagon in 1977.

The two-door wagon shares many of the sedan's dimensions. Length is four inches greater than that of the sedan, and weight has been increased only 76 pounds.

The wagon's long liftgate extends down to the bumper for easier loading of cargo. Vertical tail lamps are featured. Rack-and-pinion steering is standard on both the sedan and the wagon.

Standard engine is the 232 six with the 258 six as an option. An

"X" package is available on the sedan, and the D/L package is offered on both models.

Gremlin

Styling changes on the sub-compact Gremlin include lower hood, new egg-crate grille and revised headlamp configuration. Depth of the backlight has been increased, and tail lamps have been redesigned. Overall length is four inches less than on previous models.

Standard engine is the 232-cubic-inch six with an optional 258 six available. A four-speed manual transmission is available with both engines, and the 304 V-8 is no longer offered. A special economy package, which includes a 2.53 rear axle combined with the 232 six and four-speed transmission, will be available after production startup.

One model, a two-

Hornet

The AMX name has been revived on a special hatchback coupe version of the compact Hornet. Included in the package are front air dam, front and rear fender flares, back-light louvers, "Targa" roof band, floor console, rally instrumentation, custom trim and special decals and insignia. The 258 six and four-speed manual transmission are standard with the AMX. The 304 V-8 is optional.

An optional D/L luxury package is available on Hornet models, in addition to the sporty "X" package. The 232 six is standard; optional engines include the 258 six and the 304 V-8.

Four models are offered: Hatchback coupe, two-door sedan, four-door sedan and four-door two-seat wagon.

Matador

The intermediate Matador features the following as standard equipment in 1977: Power steering, power front disk brakes, automatic transmission, individual reclining seats, custom steering wheel, plus other convenience and decor items that previously were optional.

Standard engine on the coupe and sedan is the one-barrel 258 six.
